WLB Unit Advises FDR To Keep Wage Formula as Base

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(UP) Public members of the War Labor Board tonight advised President Roosevelt not to change the Little Steel wage ceiling formula, but to use it as the foundation for a postwar wage policy that will help guarantee maximum production and jobs.

The surprise recommendation was made in a report to the President on wartime wage stabilization. It was sent to the White House while organized labor is putting on ever stronger pressure for breaching the formula. In the forefront of these is the CIO, AFL and Mine Workers' President John L. Lewis.

The formula has been in effect since July 1942. It limits wage hikes to 15 per cent above the January 194. level. It was intended to cover the increased cost of living between January 1941 and May 1942. Labor claims that living costs have gone up as much as 43 per cent since then.

FINDINGS

The public members found that the cost of living had increased 29.4 per cent between January 1941 and October 1944, but said that average straight time hourly earnings had increased at least 36.7 per cent.

"Both prices and wages have been stabilized," they said. "Neither prices nor wages have been frozen. Prices have risen but so have the wage earner's compensation for an hour's work. Real hourly wages are slightly higher today than they were in January, 1941.

"The time has not yet come when general wage increases can be freely resumed without danger of an inflation which would be disastrous to the war effort and to the economic security of all segments of our population."

WARN AGAINST CHANGE

They said that the wartime stabilization program has not hurt peacetime wage standards. They warned that a change in the formula might result in a pressure upon prices "so formidable as to jeopardize the whole wartime stabilization program."

Industry and labor members sharply criticized the report. Industry members agreed that the formula should not be changed, but they noted that the public members "made certain other recommendations designed to freeze wartime abnormalities in the basic peacetime wage structure." They promised detailed comment later.

AFL, CIO REACTIONS

CIO and AFL members in separate dissents disagreed with the wage formula recommendation, condemned the use of average straight-time hourly earnings as the wage yardstick and denounced proposals for minimum wage legislation.

The AFL renewed its plea to the President to break the wage

2,000 Red Fliers Also Blast Reich

LONDON, Friday, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Allied Air chiefs hurled an estimated 7,000 bombers and fighters at approximately 100 Nazi communications hubs yesterday in the greatest simultaneous air assault in history—a supreme coordinated blow to knock out Germany's railway system—and the attack continued into the night.

The Berlin radio said 2,000 Russian planes also had battered targets along the eastern front, principally in East Prussia.

The United Press said estimates from official sources added to the attack by the Red air force brought to almost 11,000 the overall total of Allied planes in action over Europe yesterday and last night.

Altogether nearly 10,000 sorties were flown from the west and south before dark, but the peak was reached at around noontime when through careful planning and timing explosives cascaded down at an estimated average of 100 tons a minute.

On D-Day 13,000 sorties were flown, but these were spread over 24 hours, while in this historic new assault almost the maximum power of all Allied air forces in Europe was concentrated against the enemy within a few hours.

30,000 TAKE PART

Some 30,000 airmen from seven Allied air commands participated in the great obliteration raids, the intent of which was to break up the entire network of enemy rail transportation at one blow.

The "buckshot blitz"—an entirely new idea which Allied air chiefs had mapped and held in readiness for a break in the weather — was spearheaded by more than 1,400 Flying Fortresses and Liberators and 800 fighters of the U. S. Eighth Air Force.

Two divisions of this gigantic fleet poured into Germany from the north, and a third attacked from the south. Over the Reich they broke up into wolf packs of up to 100 bombers each and hammered at least 24 freight yards and other rail targets in the heart of Germany during the noon hour.

Eight bombers and 19 fighters were missing from this phase of the operation.

In addition the RAF and U. S. 15th Air Forces sent out heavy bombers, and the attack was swelled by four tactical air forces based on the continent, including the U. S. 12th in Italy. More than 4,500 sorties were flown by these medium and fighter bombers from advanced bases.

CARRIED INTO NIGHT

The momentum of the massive assault raged unchecked into the night. The RAF announced that swift Mosquito bombers, carrying two-ton blockbusters, again had raided Berlin and the overworked German "Achtung" warning service said other bomber formations were over the Reich.

In Thursday's great effort, the 15th Air Force bombed a number of points on the Alpine rail network in Austria and the Casarsa rail bridge in northern Italy besides hitting freight yards in the Munich area.

American Thunderbolts and British and Dominion Mustangs, Kittyhawks and Spitfires destroyed or damaged at least 20 barges in Lake Marana and the Gulf of Trieste. They also strafed seven locomotives, 35 railroad cars and 24 motor vehicles in Yugoslavia near Ljubljana.

Patton Rolls Into Saar Basin

Americans Cross River At 2 Points, Take 83 Towns in 3 Days

PARIS, Friday, Feb. 23.—(UP) Gen. Patton's Third Army, sweeping beyond the strategic Saar-Moselle triangle after a lightning conquest of 83 towns in three days, pounded across the Saar at two points yesterday in a drive of mounting speed and power aimed at the Middle Rhine.

Patton's troops overran the last seven towns in the Saar-Moselle triangle and took 17 more in the Echternach-Pruem area, grinding forward three miles at points along a 50-mile front. The drive across the Saar carried them into the rich industrial Saarland on a broad front, augmenting the long-held bridgeheads over the river in the Saarlautern area to the southeast.

Yesterday's total of 24 towns was the lowest number captured by the Third Army in the past three days. Wednesday, Patton's men took 30 towns, and on Tuesday it was 29. Of the three-day total, 49 are in the Saar-Moselle triangle.

Deep, new gains were hacked out in the Echternach-Pruem area against both ends of an isolated west wall segment, where troops that captured Obergeckler and Arzfeld are within seven miles of meeting in a junction that would clear a 30-mile stretch of the Siegfried line. Two other major road junctions, Eschfeld and Irrhausen, were captured near Arzfeld as German resistance buckled.

Warm, drying weather in the northern Rhineland aided the Canadian First Army's drive for the Ruhr by hardening roads between the Maas (Meuse) and the Rhine. All Germans except occasional snipers were driven from Goch, and the Canadians were closing in on Calcar, still in flames from 16 air attacks Wednesday.

Swiss reports said the French First Army was battering German defenses across the Rhine with powerful and sustained artillery fire and that an invasion of Germany from Alsace appeared imminent.

Patton's infantry swarmed across the Saar river in assault boats under cover of fog at points two and a half miles and five miles south of Saarburg. His tank forces swept ahead two miles to reach the Saar-Moselle river junc-

Japs Hurl Twin Attacks on Iwo; Marines Hold One, Other in Doubt

U. S. Losses Soar To 5,372 on Isle

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, GUAM, Friday, Feb. 23.—(UP)—The 28th Regiment of U. S. Marines on Iwo island has raised the American flag on the summit of Mt. Suribachi this morning, it was announced today.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, GUAM, Friday, Feb. 23.—(UP)—U. S. Marines, supported by fleet and field gun fire, have smashed a strong counterattack against the left flank of their Iwo lines, but American casualties now total 5,372, including 644 dead and losses are mounting steadily.

The Japanese counterattacked early yesterday simultaneously on the American right or east coast flank, Adm. Nimitz announced in a communique, and the issue in that sector is still in doubt.

The casualties also included 4,168 American wounded and 560 missing. High as were our losses, it was indicated the enemy's would run far higher. A total of 1,222 Japanese dead had been counted, a ratio of two to one of our losses in that category.

Nimitz announced earlier that the casualty rate had increased from 77 to more than 90 an hour and the later communique warned that an even higher loss rate could be expected.

A striking gauge of the human costliness of the fighting on Iwo Jima was provided last night when Robert Patterson, Undersecretary of War, revealed that American casualties in the December "bulge offensive" by the Germans totaled 2,000 daily.

This compares with the 90-an-hour figure, or 2,160 per day, reported for Iwo.

Patterson referred to the bulge battle as "the costliest engagement in our history."

Some desperate Japanese fliers had broken through strong American air patrols around the flaming island and inflicted damage on our shipping.

The Japanese radio claimed suicide pilots had sunk two aircraft carriers and a battleship off Iwo.

But conditions on the landing beaches, made difficult by the loose volcanic ash on the roads, were improving and "substantial" amounts of supplies were now ashore.

The Marines continued to attack stubbornly held Japanese positions in front of the island's central airfield throughout Thursday, crawling ahead inch by inch, despite murderous Japanese rifle and mortar fire raking their positions.

The Japanese organized strong counterattacks on U. S. positions on both flanks during the late afternoon. Artillery and naval guns brought the enemy concentrations under heavy fire immediately, Nimitz announced.

1,150,000 GERMANS LOST SINCE JAN. 12

LONDON, Friday, Feb. 23. (AP)—Premier-Marshal Stalin announced in an order of the day that the Germans had lost more than 1,150,000 men—800,000 killed and 350,000 captured—between Jan. 12, when the great Soviet winter offensive began, and Feb. 20.

"Complete victory over the Germans now is near," said the Soviet leader in his order commemorating today's 27th anniversary of the Red army, which, he said, "together with the armies of our Allies is successfully completing the rout of the German Fascist army."

In addition to casualties the Germans have lost 3,000 planes captured or destroyed, 4,500 tanks and self-propelled guns, and 12,000 other guns in a 40-day period, Stalin said, and Hungary, Germany's last ally in Europe, has been knocked out of the war with the recent seizure of Budapest.

Shift To South Nailed Beachhead

ADM. NIMITZ' HEADQUARTERS, GUAM, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Terming Iwo Jima the "toughest beachhead we've encountered in the Pacific," Vice Adm. John H. Hoover revealed today that the American position there appeared doomed at one fateful hour on D-Day.

Hoover, who is commander of forward areas in the Central Pacific, has just returned from witnessing the Tokyo carrier raids and the Iwo invasion. He reported in a broadcast that the Marines encountered little fire going ashore because the Japanese thought the landing on the southeast beach was a feint.

Three hours later, however, they swung mortars and howitzers into place and shells began knocking out U. S. tanks and causing casualties among the troops.

"It was a serious moment and for a while our position on the invasion beach appeared doomed," the admiral said. "But later that same day we discovered an area far to the south where we could penetrate through to the southern airfield out of range of their heaviest gunfire.

"We kept feeding our men through this region and it saved the day. But I can testify it was touch and go for a while."

Calling Saipan "easy" by comparison, Hoover declared that Iwo, besides being the "heaviest fortified island we have yet encountered in the Pacific, possesses tremendous natural barriers that also must be overcome."

He said it might take two weeks "or even longer" to secure the island, depending on whether the Japanese hole up to fight to the

Reds Gain 11 Miles To Assault Guben

LONDON, Friday, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Russian troops, threatening to outflank Berlin's eastern defenses, yesterday smashed 11 miles through reinforced German lines and clamped an assault arc around Guben, walled fortress town 51 miles southeast of the Reich capital. Guben's garrison already is being attacked, enemy broadcasts said.

Berlin predicted that a final all-out Soviet offensive was imminent now that Marshal Konev's First Ukraine Army in the southeast has drawn abreast of Marshal Zhukov's First White Russian Army holding points along the Oder river 30 to 40 miles from the capital. Zhukov's army was massed "like a colossus," awaiting attack orders, Berlin said.

Red Army forces yesterday toppled Zinten, one of the last large German strongholds in East Prussia, and also drove to within 34 miles south of Danzig, but the main action occurred on Konev's front.

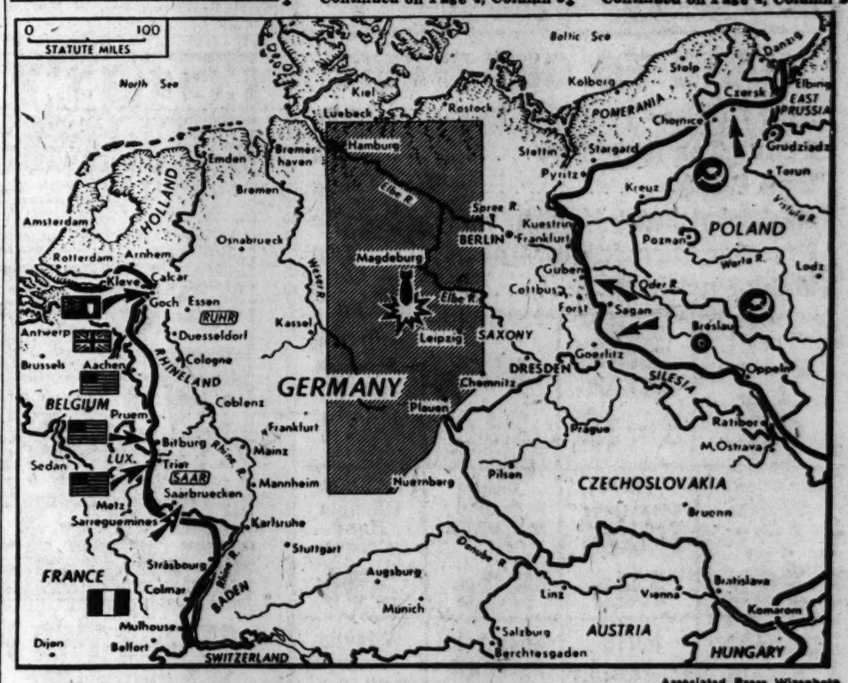

Threatening to turn Berlin's defenses, the First Ukraine Army captured 60 localities south of Guben and reached the Neisse river at various points along a winding 40-mile front. Schenkendorf, two miles south of Guben, was the nearest point to that ancient town mentioned officially by the Russians and they seized it in an 11-mile advance through forested territory to the east. Other Soviet forces the day before had reached the mouth of the Neisse at a point eight miles north of Guben and only 49 miles from Berlin.

Two thousand Germans encircled in the snowy forests southeast of Guben were wiped out, the Soviet bulletin said, and an unconfirmed report from Moscow said the Russians already had crossed the Neisse, next to last water barrier before Berlin. German broadcasts also said that the Russians were attempting to force the Neisse and encircle Guben.

Capturing Strega, farther up the Neisse, Soviet troops rolled to within five miles north of Forst and 12 miles northeast of Cottbus, big rail junction town astride the Spree river, last natural defense line before Berlin. The Russians also took Teuplitz, eight miles southeast of Forst.

At Triebel, three and one-half miles south of Teuplitz, the Russians captured another section of the big military autobahn, or superhighway, leading into Berlin.

Farther south the Russians took Gross Saerchen and Dubrau, four miles northeast and six miles east of Muskau, another junction town on the Neisse. These Soviet elements were part of Konev's central columns engaged in driving a wedge between Berlin and Dresden, Saxon capital.

GREATEST AIR SMASH—Shaded area, size and shape of Indiana, was hit heavily yesterday by 7,000 Allied planes concentrating on German railroads in a new technique, the "buckshot blitz." It was the greatest simultaneous air smash in history, and 100 Nazi transportation centers felt its devastating effect. Arrows indicate Allied land drives on eastern and western fronts. The Allies advanced on both.

A REAL 'HOUSE FIGHT'

Congressmen Drop Words, Raise Fists

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(UP)—An exchange of harsh words today exploded into a fist-fight and hair-pulling match on the house floor between Reps. John E. Rankin, Democrat, Mississippi, and Frank E. Hook, Democrat, Michigan.

Colleagues pulled them apart before either could land a solid blow or cause any bodily harm.

A resolution will be offered tomorrow to censure Hook for calling Rankin a "dirty liar." Rankin touched off the exchange by accusing Hook of associating with "dirty Communists."

Rep. John Lesinski, Democrat, Michigan, served notice that if a resolution to censure Hook is introduced, he would introduce a similar resolution against Rankin.

Censure consists of escorting the offender to the house well, where he stands before the house speaker. The speaker then censures the offender by explaining to him that he has violated the house rules.

Tonight, however, the project apparently simmered down to the prospect of a public invitation to both Hook and Rankin to apologize to the house.

Rankin, 62, and weighing scarcely 130 pounds, emerged from the battle with mussed hair and ruffled dignity. Hook, 51 and husky, fared no worse—though his adversary tugged fiercely at his hair at one point.

The fisticuffs—a rarity in congress—flared when Rankin accused Hook of being associated with "dirty Communists." Hook countered that Rankin was a "dirty liar." The house clerk said he heard Hook call Rankin a "God damned liar," but Hook denied that. He said he used the words "dirty liar."

Fair, Moderately Cool Expected for Today

Fair and moderately cool weather is the outlook for the Atlanta area today, according to A. J. Knarr, forecaster at the municipal airport. Temperatures, Knarr says, will range between 45 and 54 degrees.

The temperatures yesterday, Knarr said, were a little freakish. The high was 55 degrees at 2:30 a. m. during the heavy rainstorm, while the low was 49 at 9 a. m.

LeTourneau Plant To Hold Union Vote

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The National Labor Relations Board announced today that it had ordered a labor election for employes of the LeTourneau Company of Georgia, Tournapul, Ga., (Toccoa), within the next 30 days to determine a collective bargaining representative.

The United Steelworkers of America (CIO) is seeking to represent the employes.

Public Power Plant Tilt Stalls Constitution Pact

Georgia's proposed revised constitution apparently is headed back to conference committee, with the house unanimously rejecting the senate-house committee report because of fights waged by proponents of public power plants and opponents of a lieutenant governorship.

After turning down the conference committee by unanimous consent, the house yesterday began item-by-item consideration of 52 senate amendments, and immediately rejected the senate's proposal to create the post of lieutenant governor. The house disagreed to the first half dozen issues considered, and then adjourned.

DISCUSS SALVAGING

House leaders last night were discussing plans for salvaging most of the conference committee's recommendations, however, by having the house today agree to all senate amendments except the few major controversial issues. They listed as the third major difference between the legislative branches the question of whether homesteads should be subject to school taxation. They saw no conflict between the home rule provision in the house and senate—in which the house said the legislature "shall" provide optional systems of home rule, and the senate said this provision "shall not be mandatory."

Rep. David Arnold, of Griffin, sought to have the house resubmit to the conference committee these major items, and to agree on the other issues yesterday, but Speaker Harris said the committee's report had to be accepted or rejected as a whole.

When the house elected to vote on the senate amendments separately, the speaker warned that the general assembly would adjourn Saturday, March 3, "whether we have a new constitution or not." This would leave two weeks for another meeting next January.

FAVORS GROSS?

On the lieutenant governor issue, Rep. Pittman, of Bartow, charged it was an effort to keep Senate President Frank Gross in poower where he could control novice legislators. Speaker Harris recalled that two previous efforts to create the post had both been based on the idea of having the incumbent senate president serve temporarily as lieutenant governor.

The battle on the method of issuing revenue certificates for cities and counties to finance public power plants began yesterday shortly after Speaker Harris attacked The Atlanta Constitution's demands for home rule provisions in the state constitution.

Harris said there are only four problems of serious disagreement between the house and senate versions. They are: Creation of the office of lieutenant governor; whether homesteads shall be taxed for school purposes; what is meant by a majority vote in the requirement for issuing revenue certificates for public power and gas plants, and home rule.

On these issues, the conference committee recommended the senate plan to create a post of lieutenant governor; adopted a senate plan to continue the present system of exempting homesteads from school taxation; took the senate plan for requiring a majority of the registered voters list before issuing revenue certificates; and placing public power plants under supervision of the Georgia Public Service Commission if they did business outside their county limits, and adopted the house plan which says the legislature "shall" offer optional systems of home rule.

PROVIDES MACHINERY

On the latter item, the committee added a new provision under which the legislature could provide machinery for a locality either accepting or rejecting home rule.

The house version on revenue certificates said that they must be approved by a majority of the voters. Harris construed this to mean the same as the senate version—requiring a majority of the registered voters list.

Rep. Harrison, of Jenkins, and Reps. Hatchett and Thompson, of Meriwether, however, said the house plan required simply a majority of those voting.

Commenting on home rule, Speaker Harris said there really was no difference between the senate's "permissive" recommendation and the house's plan.

"All of us know the house plan is not mandatory and it is not necessary to add that phrase to it," Harris observed. "Home rule, under the house provision, is still permissive."

Paying his respects to The Atlanta Constitution Harris hit the paper's Thursday editorial as "vicious and hypocritical." The newspaper, an advocate of real home rule, had expressed hope that the conference committee would adopt Sen. Spencer Grayson's home rule proposal which "definitely kills home rule," instead of the house plan "which offers no home rule but is confusing." The paper said that at least Grayson's proposal would give the people a clear-cut issue in voting for adoption of the new constitution and in the next state election.

"I can say one thing on that, however," Harris continued, "the folks are going to have to want home rule before they get it. It will take more than one or two newspapers to enact it."

Replying to a label of "politician" tacked onto him by The Atlanta Constitution, the speaker said: "That newspaper has never been out of politics in the past 100 years. Its leaders have been dabbling in state politics since my grandfather was a boy. When the pot begins to call the kettle black it's a helluva note."

The conference committee's report followed the senate's plan for a merit system, which is stronger than the house provision. It adopted the house plan for a constitutional penal board, keeping five members for five years on staggered terms. The senate recommendation would have had three members for three years, which would have permitted a governor to control the board through appointment of a majority of the members during his term.

Re-establishment of the Game and Fish Commission as a constitutional board, struck from the document from the senate version, was urged by the conference group.

The committee rejected a senate proposal that would enable the legislature to reduce the number of members of three constitutional boards. It followed the senate suggestion for a seven-member Veterans' Service Board as a five-member board as asked by the house.

The conference committee turned down the senate's provision for a peace officers' pension tax, and also rejected a senate provision making it mandatory for women to serve on juries.

In ironing out differences between the house and senate, the committee asked the house to recede on 24 points, the senate to recede on 22 points, and both to recede on six points so they could be rewritten.

Food To Be Short; V-Garden 'Panic' Urged for State

Georgia's bountiful meals face a wartime dieting unless city and farm folk alike bring about a vegetable planting "panic" as intensive as the sewing, canning, savings plan of two years ago.

Sid D. Truitt.

Last year, gardeners held back because of limited supplies of fertilizer, difficulty of buying seed, and an almost negligible reserve of labor. But, with national promises of shorter food stocks, Atlantans will be urged to raise everything from tomatoes grown in window boxes to large-plot variety gardens.

Victory garden leaders met here yesterday with County Agent Sid D. Truitt to map plans for arousing interest in vegetable planting, fruit and animal raising in Georgia, and particularly in the metropolitan areas.

Truitt summarized the problem: Pork will be off market shelves for three, four or five months this year. Vegetables, short before Christmas, remain limited in all stores. OPA's return of points for canned vegetables curbs the amount of food one person can buy. Farming suffers a labor depletion because of war jobs and military services. People in the country grow few vegetables because many eat a limited amount of them. Canned products, stored away in 1943, are becoming extinct and 1944's supply is almost nil.

Donald Hastings, Atlanta seedman, said that there is no question about the need for more gardens in 1945. He advocated off-day work in victory gardens, and particularly suggested that industrial firms urge their workers to spend spare time with their hoes.

C. H. Bishop, farmers' market official, cited the need for "educating" persons in most constructive forms of victory gardening.

Frank Everett, another Atlanta seedman, said that many truck farmers in northern Florida and south Georgia have not planted crops this year because they were unable to obtain labor. He termed this "the biggest reason why city people should plant their own gardens."

Roy Davis, school official, suggested that speakers be sent to Atlanta schools, urging children to cultivate plots. "Sell a kid on the idea," he commented, "and he'll go home and sell his folks."

Three Killed, 101 Wounded, One Missing on Battlefronts

Two more Georgians have been killed in action, one is missing, and 101 have been wounded, according to War Department reports released for today.

In all these cases, next of kin have been previously notified and kept informed directly by the department of any change in status.

Killed:

Maj. Joe B. Shirley, 32, Armored Division, was killed in action in Belgium Jan. 16, the War Department has notified his wife, the former Edna Elkins, of Arab, Ala., and his mother, Mrs. J. N. Shirley, of Lavonia.

Before going on active duty in Febuary, 1942, Maj. Shirley was employed as engineer by the forestry division of the Tennessee Valley Authority in Huntsville, Ala. Public Service Power Over Airways Denied

By ELMO GREENE.

The senate has killed a measure to give the Georgia Public Service Commission regulatory power over intrastate air commerce, and the house has withdrawn consideration of a proposal to ban closed shops in Georgia.

This action was taken yesterday.

Sen. Spence Grayson, of Savannah, senate president pro tem, and author of the air commerce bill, served notice he would seek reconsideration of the measure which is opposed by Gov. Arnall and the air lines.

Failing by three votes to receive the requisite senate majority of 27 votes, the defeated bill was a half page substitute to the original measure of 22 pages. Whereas the first bill designated the regulations to be enforced by the Public Service Commission, the substitute merely proposed the following:

"All intrastate air commerce shall be subject to supervision and regulation by the Georgia Public Service Commission in accordance with any and all laws hereafter enacted by the general assembly prescribing regulations therefor."

Controversial legislation designed to outlaw closed shops in Georgia was withdrawn from house consideration at the request of its author, Rep. Lovette, of Laurens, who charged the proposed constitutional amendment had been "stifled."

Contending he had tried for three weeks to have the proposal placed on the house calendar, Lovette intimated that "the powers that be in labor unions" had dominated house leadership.

"PLAYED FAIR"

Speaker Roy Harris took the floor to say that "we have played fair with this bill, and we have tried to play fair with every bill in this house. . . . During seven years as speaker, I have never yet choked off a major bill from the calendar."

Asserting the measure "does not do what the gentleman (Lovette) thinks it does," Harris argued that if the legislature placed it in the constitution "you take away the right of an employer to make contracts with his employes as he sees fit."

Lovette, pointing out that the proposal would require 137 votes to pass, expressed his belief it would have been brought up for consideration when a paucity of proponents was present.

WHISKY ELECTIONS

By a vote of 103 to 9, the house passed a bill by Rep. Harrison, of Jenkins, stipulating that local option elections on whisky, beer and wine in a county might be held on the same day, on petition of 35 per cent of the qualified voters. Under present law, beer and wine may not be voted on at the same time as whisky.

Another Harrison measure passed by the house would make it unlawful to sell beer and wine within 100 feet of a school building. The author said he had intended to set the distance at 100 yards, but by error had said "feet."

The house unanimously passed legislation removing limitations on the commissioner of agriculture on the number of fertilizer inspectors he might employ and on the salaries he might pay them—so long as he does not exceed the appropriation for his department.

By a vote of 27 to 6, the senate passed a bill by Sen. C. J. Wellborn, of Blairsville, to require every voter to state his party affiliation when registering as a voter. The bill now goes to the house.

Another measure passed by the upper house authorizes the State Game and Fish Commission to purchase through the purchasing department an airplane to be used to patrol coastal waters of the state and commercial fisheries "to better enforce the laws" regulating them.

The senate approved, 27 to 5, a bill to increase the state librarian's annual salary from $3,000 to $4,000. Miss Ella May Thornton is state librarian.

tion opposite the rail town of Konz.

From Konz it is only four miles to the outskirts of Trier, ancient Roman fortress of the first century and oldest city in Germany, which stands as a major barrier on the Moselle valley invasion route to the Rhine.

Armored forces fighting inside Saarburg cleared the last Germans from the main part of town west of the river. Late reports said there was no attempt to cross the river at Saarburg into the east part of town.

INFANTRY CROSSING

The first infantry crossing south of Saarburg was made near Serrig, on the east bank of the Saar, and the Americans were reported driving the Germans out of the town in a stubborn house-to-house battle.

Serrig is a station on the main Saarbruecken-Trier rail line running along the east bank of the river.

The second crossing was at Taben-Rodt, two and a half miles south of Serrig. Front reports said German opposition was limited to small-arms fire and that the Nazis had not yet opened up with artillery from the Siegfried line.

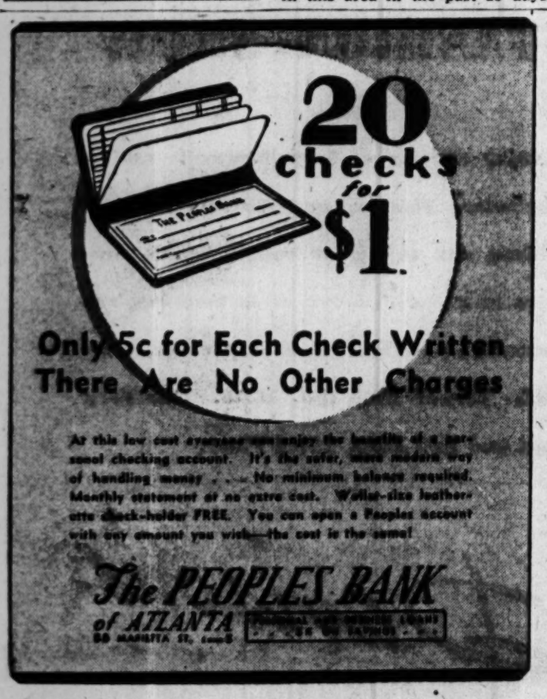

Elimination of all opposition in the 80-square-mile Saar-Moselle triangle was accomplished with the capture of Fellerich among six towns taken in the final mop-up. Late front dispatches said Patton's tanks were in threatening positions on high ground opposite Konz.

Patton's offensive swept up 600 prisoners Wednesday for a total of 2,600 in the first 48 hours of his three-day-old Moselle offensive alone. Within the past 24 hours the Third Army has captured 1,925 prisoners along its 50-mile front for a 22-day total of 13,000.

OTHER TOWNS FALL

In addition to capturing Saarburg, Patton's armor took the towns of Kahren, Nittel, Mannebach and Tawern in its drive toward Konz.

Other Third Army troops rolling up a 30-mile stretch of the Siegfried line in the Echternach-Pruem area north of the Moselle overran an additional 13 towns and knocked out at least 55 new pillboxes, bringing to 936 the total number of pillboxes neutralized in this area in the past 25 days.

CHURCH IN THE WILD WOOD—The tumbled, twisted remains of the Mount Zion Negro Baptist church are dismally surveyed by two of its congregation after the 100-mile-per-hour-plus wind that swept through Fairburn early yesterday, left the church in complete ruins. Several Negro houses in the neighborhood were demolished by the freakish gale. Several of the congregation said the wind was a "ball of fire" through the windy heavens, leaving destruction along its path.

Senate Okays City Plan for 'Rail Gully'

Atlanta has gained the consent of the state senate to span the "railroad gully" between Spring street and Central avenue with a system of plazas and other improvements.

This okay was given yesterday in a resolution adopted in the upper house by a vote of 33 to 3. Under a substitute submitted by Sen. G. Everett Millican, author of the resolution, the senate's approval would be subject to the indorsement of the governor and the Georgia Public Service Commission, as well as the lessee of the Western & Atlantic Railroad.

An amendment by Sen. George Y. Harrell, of Lumpkin, also would require the attorney general's consent. It was adopted unanimously.

The resolution, which now goes to the house, provides that: the state does not surrender its right, title or interest in or future enjoyment and use of the W. & A. property by nodding to the city's request; neither the state nor the W. & A. railroad shall in any way be responsible for any damages growing out of the building and maintenance of the plazas, and the improvements may be planned by separate units or block-to-block construction, as, for instance, from Central avenue to Pryor street, and from Pryor street to Whitehall street.

Hot debate was touched off, however, when Sen. George Sabados, of Albany, offered an amendment that would have given the general assembly authority to approve all plans for the plazas.

"This is nothing but a two-block hole in the middle of Atlanta," Sen. Millican contended. "It depreciates all the property around it and costs the state money by reducing tax values."

The amendment was voted down, 28 to 5.

Welles Assails Parley's Snub To Argentina

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 22. (AP)—Sumner Welles, former undersecretary of state and a pioneer of good neighbor diplomacy, took sharp issue tonight with the exclusion of Argentina and El Salvador from the American Foreign Ministers' Conference now under way at Mexico City.

In an address prepared for delivery at the 15th anniversary dinner of the Pan American League, Welles saw evidences "of disintegration in the structure of that inter-American system which had been so steadily built up during the years before the Second World War—years in which every other form of decent and righteous international order was crumbling into ruin."

He was caustic in his criticism of the United States State Department's handling of Latin American affairs, particularly of the Argentine situation.

He decried what he called attempts to coerce Argentina by nonrecognition of the Argentine government.

It was through coincidence that Welles spoke while the foreign ministers are in session. He was invited to make the speech several months ago, long before the Mexico City conference was called.

High Wind Rips Fairburn, Bringing Death, Destruction

By STERLING SLAPPEY,
Constitution Staff Writer.

FAIRBURN, Ga., Feb. 22.—A freakish, high-velocity wind traveling at more than 100 miles per hour swept in a northeasterly direction through the edge of this suburban Atlanta town at 2:20 a. m. yesterday, leveling nine houses, causing the death of one woman and leaving several other buildings and structures damaged in a distinct path that could be easily traced by broken and uprooted trees, twisted tin roofing and crushed buildings.

Mrs. C. H. Stephens was instantly killed during the height of the wind when timbers from her home pinned her to the floor of her bedroom. Her husband, "Hop" Stephens, and their four-year-old daughter, Shirley, who were asleep in the house, were not injured.

The Stephens home was derooofed and two of its sides were blown into a plowed field across Water Tank road just outside Fairburn.

A group of Negro houses between Fairburn and Union City were damaged, and two were swept from their foundations and blown into cotton and corn fields adjoining the houses.

The Mount Zion Negro Baptist church was completely demolished. An old building, constructed of whitewashed boarding, the church buckled through the center of the roof and caved in on top of the pews.

A rally had been held in the church Wednesday night to raise money to make needed improvements on the church building.

A Negro house, about a quarter of a mile from the church, was completely swept away, leaving only the floor and all of the furniture in the driving rain that followed the freakish gale. Six Negroes were asleep in the house when the wind struck, carrying the roof above their heads into a near-by field. None of the Negroes were injured.

The homes of Luther Hardy, deputy sheriff, and Margaret Jones, both on Cole road, were partially damaged, in addition to several barns in the immediate vicinity. A small pavillion in the Fairburn cemetery was overturned and destroyed.

The top of the city water tank was blown away and the cooling tower of the city ice plant was demolished.

The path of the high wind was a mile and a half long and about 200 feet wide. The trail of ruin began at the edge of the Fairburn cemetery and ended at the southern edge of Union City, not far from the Stephens home.

Stettinius, Padilla Urge: Banish Want!

CHAPULTEPEC CASTLE, Mex. Feb. 22.—(AP)—Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius Jr., told the Inter-American conference today that an essential aim in a five-point American foreign policy program is an Atlantic Charter peace of "freedom from fear and want for all men."

Stettinius, in the first review of American foreign policy since the Yalta conference, asked the other 18 countries represented here to support the ideas of the Crimean declaration and alerted them against any Nazi attempts to use the Western Hemisphere as a base "for an ultimate comeback."

Mexican Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla joined Stettinius in calling on the American nations to unite for a securely peaceful and prosperous world.

PLEDGES CHARTER SUPPORT

Outlining the five cardinal principles of United States policy, Stettinius declared that the United States would give active and full support to the principles of the Atlantic Charter, which, he said, were upheld by the Big Three at Yalta.

Other points in the U. S. foreign policy program as disclosed by Stettinius included the "earliest possible" final defeat of the Axis; measures to prevent Japan and Germany from aggression again; guarantees to the liberated peoples of Europe of their own government and sovereign rights and creation of an international security organization to preserve the peace of the world.

Padilla made an eloquent plea for a comprehensive economic program for this continent, declaring "there is no excuse for the poverty of America."

"The war is the greatest social revolution of history," he added. "We must realize the dream of the humble man of the world."

BACKS OAKS AGENDA

Padilla expressed his support of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals, asserting that:

"Peace is not all. Peace without justice does not merit its name."

He declared the world must face a battle between two ideologies—violence and democracy—and charged the Americas to fight against militarism.

"A regression to totalitarianism or Nazi-Fascism anywhere is a menace to America," he said.

Stettinius and Padilla spoke in the elegant chamber of deputies, crowded to the roof while Mexicans milled about outside listening to the proceedings from loudspeakers.

was amazing to behold, either from the air or the ground.

BOMBERS EVERYWHERE

One Eighth Air Force pilot, Lt. John Mitenbuler, of Loraine, Ohio, gave this vivid description:

"The bombers were hitting bridges, freight yards, tunnels and transportation everywhere. There were so many planes in the air you couldn't move. Bombers and swarms of fighters were piled layer on layer. The country there will never stop bouncing.

"Fires were burning everywhere as far as I could see. In one freight yard every time a salvo of bombs hit, big balls of flame would shoot up, sometimes higher than the planes themselves."

Instead of dropping their bombs from 20,000 feet or higher as usual the four-engined Fortresses and Liberators swept over their targets at about 10,000 feet. Bomber gunners were so close to the ground they used their machineguns to shoot at railway cars and other objects.

Few Nazi planes were encountered and the Allied escorts kept them from getting close to the bombers. At most points flak was not heavy.

EXCELLENT RESULTS

This absence of opposition from the enemy and the brilliant sunshiny weather over most of the objectives permitted careful bombing and excellent results. A few of the bombers ran into clouds and had to aim by instruments.

The escorting fighters fanned out later to strafe moving transportation and machine gunned at least 100 locomotives, 300 rail cars and 30 motor vehicles.

The Eighth Air Force fighters, taking on what opposition developed, shot down six enemy planes—four jet-propelled.

Tactical air force fighters sped back and forth across the battle lines, making repeated flights, and running into more action than planes of the Eighth Air Force. A late count last night showed 21 enemy planes destroyed in the air and no Allied planes missing.

Argentina Flouts 'German Blockade'

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 22.—(INS)—The Argentine government, after a cabinet meeting, issued a decree tonight declaring it does "not recognize the German blockade" and instructing Argentine ships to feel free to travel "in every zone and to enter any port."

Usually well informed quarters tonight declared "radical changes" are imminent in the Argentine government within 48 hours.

It was believed that a new cabinet would be headed by either Minister of the Navy Tessaire or Brig. Gen. Bartolome de la Colina of the air forces.

Nevertheless, the general impression in other Buenos Aires circles tonight was that no governmental change would come about until after the Inter-American conference in Mexico City.

HOUR OF INDECISION

Crouches On TNT Under Rain of Fire

By JOHN LARDNER.

WITH THE FIFTH AMPHIBIOUS CORPS AT IWO JIMA, Feb. 22.—(NANA)—Now that the temperature has gone down somewhat on the beach where your correspondent landed here with the Fifth Marine Division, it seems permissible to relate how a dozen of us Marines, sailors and word-painters were pinned down by Japanese mortar fire for three-quarters of an hour in the middle of an ammunition dump. The ammunition has now moved away from there and so have the mortars and so have we, though not in the order named.

If the scenario writers of the old Pearl White movie serials were stuck for a good uncomfortable spot in which to leave their heroine at the finish of a week's installment, they could do worse than put her in the middle of an ammunition dump under mortar fire. It's maybe not so graceful as hanging by your teeth from the edge of a cliff, but it gives you more time to think.

Two of the boys in this predicament—Marines whose names I cannot mention—had shrapnel in their legs from a shell which had exploded there a little earlier. They lay more quietly than the rest of us who squirmed every time a gun went off.

It was a scene typical of the early phase of our Iwo Jima landings, and each time you got pinned by such sprays while waiting for a ride off the beach you marveled more at the skill and speed with which supplies, artillery, tanks and half tracks were brought to land under this steady, heavy rain of fire. Of course you don't ordinarily or purposely get yourself in the middle of an ammunition dump on a mortared beach. You are crouching there at the water's edge looking for a boat going your way and the ammunition dump sort of grows up around you.

That was how it was this time. Boats—the wrong boats—came up to the beach and went, and it was some minutes before we noticed the sort of cargo they were piling on the sand to the right and left, before and behind us. After a while those brown boxes with letters caught the eye. No sooner did they catch the eye than they registered. "Live ammunition." At exactly the same time, Jap mortars began to register more closely and went on doing so.

The last half-hour was something I would not wish on my worst enemy—a fellow whose name escapes me at the moment—but it was improved by the rescue and evacuation of wounded Marines by a group of Army relief workers. At the end of that time, two of us recovered from our slightly comatose surprise and jumped into the closest boat. It was not going to same way we were but as the sailor steering the craft remarked, any move was a good one.

"I don't know what you fellows use for brains," said the seaman as he headed for the open sea.

CONGRESS

None would say which of the combatants won the fight—which was hardly more than a clinching match. But Rankin had the last word.

The Mississippian, with some fast parliamentary in-fighting, moved to have Hook's recorded words read to the house and expunged. Hook countered with a similar motion about Rankin's motion. But Rankin made his demand first so he was sustained. Hook had to take his seat and—in Rankin's words—"keep his mouth shut for the rest of the day."

But Hook, a 195-pound former Michigan lumberjack and miner, talked afterwards—to reporters.

He said that when Rankin made the Communist charge, he replied "You're a dirty liar."

"Rankin came down and swung at me," he related. "I held him off. He swung again. He tried to pull my hair and scratch me.

"As far as I was concerned there weren't any blows struck. You can say that I respect old age. I wouldn't hit Rankin."

THREE ROUNDS

Here is a blow-by-blow description of the battle as seen and heard from the house press gallery:

Round I—Rep. Clare E. Hoffman, Republican, Michigan, attacked the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Rankin, long-time foe of the CIO, rose and added his denunciation. Hook, who was elected last November with labor backing, defended the CIO. They sparred verbally.

Round II—Rankin opened up with a strong verbal barrage. He referred to the Fair Employment Practices Committee and—looking at Hook—said "the dirty Communists the gentleman from Michigan is associated with." Waving his right arm up and down, Hook countered with "you're a dirty liar." They moved in close.

Round III—Rankin appeared to raise his right arm in gesture. The two tangled. They exchanged blows—feeble ones. They clinched. Rankin held Hook's head against his chest. He tugged fiercely at Hook's hair. Colleagues separated them. End of fight.

OLD GLORY ON TOP—U. S. Marines using flamethrowers and tanks are mopping up Japanese in pillboxes and caves after capturing Iwo Jima's natural fort, Suribachi, right, the volcano at the southern tip of the island. This closeup aerial view was made on D-Day, Feb. 19, as one wave of assault boats speeds out for more Marines and others move toward the island. Victory at this outpost is costing heavily in casualties.

U. S. Invades Capul Island In Philippines

MANILA, Friday, Feb. 23.—(AP) Veterans of the Americal Division invaded tiny Capul island in the San Bernardino straits just off Luzon's long southern tip on Wednesday in a move to clear the Japanese from the main shipping route from the United States to Manila.

Opposition was light.

The small oval island, five miles long and two wide at the middle, commands the strait through which the Japanese sent a war fleet to harass the American invasion of Leyte last October.

It lies directly between the extensive southeastern tip of Luzon and the northern end of Samar island, which is practically in American hands. It is 260 airline miles southeast of Manila and about 325 by sea.

MacArthur announced also that steady reduction of the remaining Japanese pocket in south Manila was continuing and said 11th Airborne Division Americans advancing along the west coast of Laguna de Bay, southeast of Manila, reached the town of Muntinulpa.

In the southern Caraballo mountains north of Manila Americans of the First Corps secured high ground east of Sison in the steady campaign to push the Japanese into the mountains of northeast Luzon.

Heavy bombers swept enemy defense positions on eastern and western Luzon. Fighters and light bombers destroyed 15 gun positions in the Antipolo-Montalban area west of Manila, where the enemy has been reported girding for a stand.

day, Atlanta time), the troops appeared to have repulsed the assault on the left flank where the Fifth Marine Division was menacing the airfield from the west coast. Heavy rains hampered the American progress.

No reports were available on the action on the right.

A total of 1,222 enemy dead have been counted, Nimitz said.

But Lt. Gen. Holland M. Smith, Marine commandant, said that his men would take Iwo, 750 miles from Tokyo, at whatever cost. The cost, he added, would be severe.

Nimitz announced that American casualties for the first 56 3-4 hours on Iwo—up to 5:45 p. m. Wednesday—were 385 killed and 4,168 wounded. There was a total of 3,650 men wounded, missing or killed in the first 47 hours.

Again and again Wednesday night and in the predawn hours of Thursday the Japanese counterattacked in force. Each attack was hurled back. Throughout the night countless enemy troops tried to filter through the Marine lines.

PREDAWN ONSLAUGHT

This morning the Marines went over to the attack again. For hours the enemy lines held. At noon, however, the Marines were advancing slowly in the pouring rail. They had knocked out many enemy strong points and, Adm. Nimitz said generally weakened the formidable defenses of the central airdrome in the heart of Iwo. But Nimitz added:

"There was little change in positions of the front line."

It was a foot-by-foot advance. The Marines were believed to be about 200 yards from the southern edge of the airdrome. It was indicated that every yard would be redeemed by American blood before the first men stormed onto the field.

In the south the battle was just as tough. There the Marines had the job of taking the Suribachi volcano, a mountain turned into a fortress.

JAP BOMBS HIT FLEET

It was at sunset Wednesday, Nimitz revealed, that the first enemy planes broke through the American aerial screen to reach the invasion fleet. Bombers and fighters swept through to the fleet area, and Nimitz said that they did some damage to fleet units. Seven enemy planes were shot down by patrol planes and anti-aircraft guns.

The unloading of supplies on the beaches continued, Nimitz said, "under difficulties caused by the loose composition of the volcanic ash shore line."

Major Role For Air Arm In Peace Seen

LONDON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—A hint that powerful air forces would play a major role in a broad Allied plan to keep the peace came today from Prime Minister Churchill, along with assurances that Nazi V-bombs would be borne in mind when armistice terms are laid down for Germany.

Brushing aside a suggestion that "the whole question of the limitation of aerial warfare" be taken up after the defeat of Germany, the prime minister bluntly replied: "I certainly do not think that the victorious Allies should deprive themselves of defenses which are possible through the air."

Without elaborating, Churchill implied that any sweeping worldwide disarmament such as that after the last war certainly was not included in the "Big Three" peace plan.

And with a sharp "yes, sir," the prime minister assured the house that he would "bear in mind" when imposing peace terms the Germans' V-bomb attacks on civilians and that he would see to it that Germany was never again in a position to manufacture such weapons.

Churchill was on the floor only a few minutes during today's sessions amid sparring for next week's debate on foreign policy. The government served notice that it would demand a blanket indorsement of the entire Crimea conference declaration.

With a small bloc in Churchill's own Conservative party threatening to revolt against the "Big Three" plans for Poland, the government carried the challenge directly to them in setting down a motion for a vote of confidence on an all-or-nothing basis.

6TH GRADER NEW STEPMA'AM OF 10

SHELDON, Mo., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Mary Lou Brown, sixth grade student, is the new stepmother of 10 children, two of them in the Army and five of them her schoolmates.

She and Ralph Houdeshell, farmer and father of the children, were married last Saturday at Girard, Kan.

The consent for the girl to marry was signed by "Maude Brown," who listed her daughter's age as 17. Miss Nadine Crites, the girl's schoolteacher, said she was 13. Houdeshell gave his age as 30.

Houdeshell's first wife and mother of the 10 children died last year at the age of 43.

World Cotton Group To Meet in Washington

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The State Department announced today that the International Cotton Advisory Committee will meet here beginning March 26.

The committee, established in September, 1939, is charged with studying and reporting on problems in the world's cotton industry.

Member countries which are expected to send delegates are Brazil, Egypt, India, Peru, Mexico, Turkey, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Russia and the British and French cotton exporting colonies, and the United States.

"The primary objective of the discussions," the department said, "will be to survey the various aspects of the world cotton situation, especially problems affecting international trade in that commodity, and to formulate recommendations for subsequent consideration by the individual countries for the solution of such problems."

Leslie A. Wheeler, director of the office of foreign agricultural relations of the Department of Agriculture is chairman of the committee.

formula while the CIO said the report had raised serious questions affecting the nation and labor.

Looking ahead, the public members said they presumed that the WLB would be responsible for stabilizing wage rates against a deflationary or inflationary movement in the reconversion period. They said the reconversion goal is "a level of production, distribution and consumption high enough to absorb into peacetime production all the enormous capacity for production we have demonstrated in war."

As an aid to attaining that goal they proposed:

1. Establishment through collective bargaining of well-balanced wage rate schedules to replace the present haphazard structures of many companies.

2. Development through collective bargaining of effective procedures for making wage determinations as well as price determinations which will enable reconversion plans to be made with as little delay and uncertainty as possible.

3. Revision of the fair labor standards act to increase the present 40 cents an hour minimum wage and to establish minimum rates for a limited number of key occupations above the minimum starting rate.

4. Calling of a general industry-labor conference to deal with basic principles and mutual obligations in the reconversion and postwar periods which, when formulated, might be incorporated in a national agreement.

last man or expend their forces in a "suicidal banzai charge."

"Regardless of what tactics the Japs use, we have the necessary manpower and equipment to insure an American victory."

He said the U. S. will put Iwo into operation as an air base pointed at Tokyo soon after it is secured.

"You must remember," he concluded, "that we can do in months what it takes the Japs years to accomplish."

Girl, 18, in Hospital, Victim of Hit-Run Car

Miss Margery Ruth Davenport, 18, who lives on the Buford highway near Duluth, is in a critical condition in the Veterans hospital as a result of injuries received when a hit-and-run driver struck her yesterday afternoon.

Miss Davenport, who works for a government agency here, got off a bus in front of her home and was crossing the road, police say, when the hit-and-run driver knocked her down.

W. M. Johnson, chief of police of Duluth, has sent out an alarm for the driver.

Driving While Drunk Charged To Sheriff

Sheriff A. B. (Bud) Foster yesterday was charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicants in an accusation sworn out by County Patrolman A. H. Barton in the criminal court of Fulton county.

Barton and Patrolman W. F. Whitaker, who was listed as a witness, reported an accident in which Foster was involved on the Roosevelt highway, near College Park, last Feb. 10. According to the police report, Foster had been drinking and was with a woman.

County Police Chief C. H. Millians, who investigated the report and appeared before the grand jury with the two officers, instructed the policemen to make an accusation.

Solicitor Lindley W. Camp said he would accept a $100 appearance bond, the usual bond made in such cases, signed by the sheriff. He added that the case would take "its natural course" and that a case is usually ready for trial 30 days after an accusation is made.

WATCH 'EM NOW, MOTORISTS

Block of Wood Device Checks Brakes Perfectly

A little block of wood, one inch thick, soon will become an important part of the equipment of Georgia law enforcement officers.

And the same little block of wood is likely to prove a splinter in the hands of many Georgia motorists.

Hudson R. Hamm, of Evanston, Ill., a representative of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, yesterday explained the little block of wood to Georgia law enforcement officers who had gathered in the auditorium of the Georgia state patrol to hear him outline plans for a nation-wide brake-testing campaign to be launched April 15 and extending through June 1.

The block of wood, with a nick cut into it so that the block will fit around the brake pedal arm, enables a law enforcement officer to determine in a matter of seconds if the brakes on a car are good.

The block of wood is slipped back of the brake pedal, and when it touches the floorboard the brakes are defective if it prevents the brakes from taking a firm grip.

"It is a method suggested by President Roosevelt," Hamm told the gathering. "It has been scientifically tested, and found to function perfectly."

Hamm will hold meetings at Athens March 5; Americus, March 6; Tifton, March 7; Waycross, March 8, and Statesboro, March 9.

Posters advertising the national brake testing campaign will be distributed throughout the state, Hamm said.

Limit Nazi, Jap Exports, Urges Gerard

By INEZ ROBB.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(INS)—Unrivaled prosperity for the postwar world can be achieved through limitation of German and Japanese exports to the bare minimum necessary to purchase adequate food for their populaces, James W. Gerard, famed World War I American ambassador to Germany, predicted today as he vigorously demanded drumhead court-martial trials for all German war criminals.

This limitation of German and Japanese exports as the key to postwar prosperity is a plan advanced here and in Washington, D. C., Gerard said, by one of America's and the world's foremost financiers and economists.

PREDICTS BOOM

"But if he is too modest to assume authorship of the plan, I'll father it," said the former ambassador to Germany. "I believe this limitation of cheap German and Japanese exports, which once flooded the world markets, would result in such boom as would make our past economic joys and sorrows seem picayune.

"I believe Secretary Morgenthau's plan to turn Germany into an agricultural nation is impossible, but could be modified. It is impossible because my long studies in Germany have showed me that German soil will not support the entire German people. About 12,000,000 of her population are dependent on imported foodstuffs.

GERMANY'S LIMIT

"Germany has to export to buy abroad the food to feed that 12,000,000. But Morgenthau's plan is susceptible of modification to forbid Germany to export more than enough products to buy necessary food.

"And if the same plan were adopted with regard to Japan and her exports, we wouldn't have to worry about adequate jobs when the war is over."

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passage with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Brazil's Fliers Score in Italy

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—(INS) The War Department tonight praised the impressive record run up by the colorful First Brazilian Fighter Squadron of the 12th U. S. Air Force during its 14 months in action against tactical Axis targets from bases in Italy.

The department said that the squadron of Brazilian pilots, whose average age is 22, is fighting under its own national colors as an independent unit of Maj. Gen. John K. Cannon's 12th U. S. Air Force. Squadron Commander Lt. Col. Nero Moura is an internationally known fighter pilot.

Between Oct. 31, 1944 and Jan. 22, 1945, the unit flew 897 sorties, dropping 339 bombs, losing five aircraft to antiaircraft and five of their pilots, said the War Department.

U. S. Gains More Italian Heights

ROME, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Pressing forward against growing German opposition, Fifth Army forces consolidated their newly-won positions around Mt. Belvedere and near-by Mt. Gorgolesco in the Etruscan Apennines, Allied headquarters announced today, as other units gained more than half a mile in a fresh breakthrough just east of Mt. Belvedere.

With protective fleets of tactical air force planes hovering over the attack area, American doughboys began their push Wednesday and added the Mazzancana Hill feature and three unidentified heights to Allied-held terrain.

Peace Focus on Mexico City

There is now in progress an inter-American conference at Mexico City which, in importance to the future peace of the world, is second only to the recent "Big Three" meeting at Yalta.

The importance of the Mexico City meeting centers in the fact that it proposes to develop a unified Pan-American policy, primarily on economic and monetary problems, in advance of the coming United Nations meeting at San Francisco on April 25. It is vital to all hopes for successful organization of a world program for lasting peace that the nations of the Americas themselves demonstrate a new unity and new spirit of mutual concession. The Americas must show the world the way to the opening of markets and of sources of raw material, that will enhance the prosperity of all, without recourse to force. If the Americas cannot do this, there can be little hope that the world as a whole can achieve such an objective.

Availability both of markets and of raw materials to all must be achieved before there can be any real hope of lasting world peace. For it is these two benefits over which most wars have begun.

Many of the Latin-American nations fear, properly so, a depression in the post-war years due to the end of heavy war-time purchases of raw materials by the United States. A depression is always a period of immediate danger to world peace. There must be, then, no artificial handicaps, such as prohibitive tariffs, no special privileges such as exclusive import rights, between the American nations. Only by such a policy can economic depression, with all its dangers and evils, be kept away from this continent.

And it is self-evident that if depression is permitted to cast its dire shadow over any portion of the American world, the entire structure of any international organization for peace is thereby periled.

Much depends, then, on successful agreement at the Mexico City conference on a new unity among the American nations and a specific, internation program of economic and monetary co-operation. The American nations can open the path of co-operation and point the way to the whole world.

In Which We Recommend a Lobbyist

Substituting for Editor Ralph McGill today is Charles J. Bloch, president of the Georgia Bar Association, and the one lobbyist in the present legislature whose activities The Constitution not only condones but wholeheartedly indorses.

Mr. Bloch has neglected his lucrative Macon law practice for the past few weeks to devote the majority of his time to working with administration leaders in an effort to bring about enactment of a program of judiciary reform long needed in this state.

The program, conceived and sponsored by the state's leading lawyers, is outlined in some detail by Mr. Bloch in a two-part series, the first of which appears in Mr. McGill's space today. We recommend Mr. Bloch's article and the Bar Association's proposals to our readers and the legislature.

A Surefire Recipe for Constitution Rejection

The special conference committee named to reconcile differences in the redrafts of the constitution passed in the two houses of the state legislature seems to have done the best possible job of salvaging the better features from both versions.

Certainly it is to be congratulated upon eliminating the iniquitous section whereunder constitutional boards would have been subjected once again to political interference.

It is to be hoped that the senate will agree to deletion of this provision. Undoubtedly it will unless—as has seemed increasingly evidenced by the action of recent days—the legislators are determined that efforts to modernize Georgia's archaic constitution shall fail to receive public ratification.

Adoption of a provision empowering future legislatures to throw out members of constitutional boards, as well as to change their rate of pay at will, is perhaps the most effective step yet taken by opponents of constitution reform to insure that the people will reject the revised organic law.

Not even the emasculating of the immensely popular home rule section in the commission's version of the proposed new constitution will engender as great amount of public indignation as this latest action.

For the people of Georgia have had their fill of political juggling of constitutional boards.

They have learned to their sorrow what can happen when the right to lop off board members at will is delivered into the hands of those who place political power above public good.

One of the most valuable reforms effectuated during this entire administration is the placing of such units as the Board of Regents of the University System, the State Board of Education and the Board of Pardons and Paroles beyond the reach of partisan politics.

And now, lo and behold, the senate at one fell swoop would abolish the safeguards and nullify whatever progress has been made.

It is a terrible mistake, one, we feel sure, which will result in public repudiation of the entire new constitution unless the senate follows the recommendation of the special conference committee and rescinds its deplorable action in this regard.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

The Constitution welcomes letters from its readers. They must be signed, should not exceed 200 words.

Fascism Winning?

Editor Constitution: There are certain trends now in which we should be interested. First, there was the discussion on compulsory military training; second, there was the proposed bill for compulsory or slave labor, and finally, third, there is the plan to bomb the civilians in the German cities (ruthless terror raids).

Who is to say that Fascism has lost this war? The spirit of Nazism can be destroyed only by the German people. We are being psychologically prepared for a new peace of reprisal which will breed new and more terrible wars. The antidote to this hysteria is a clear understanding of the background of the present war and a solemn determination that the mistakes, failures and betrayals that followed the first one shall not be repeated.

Draft Protesters

Editor Constitution: A great storm of protest has arisen from owners and patrons of juke joints, gambling halls and night clubs about closing at midnight.

I, for one of millions, think the proper thing to do with such howlers is to draft each and every one and ship directly to the fighting fronts.

No, I don't mean that they should be given guns and placed beside our soldiers to fight—such gripers are too yellow for that—but they could scrape the mud and slime from the boots and uniforms of our fighting men, and keep their underclothing washed and dried.

I hope our draft boards will take notice and see that all such parasites get their just deserts.

CARL F. MORGAN.
Hapeville, Ga.

Georgia First

Editor Constitution: Maybe other people have forgotten about Georgia but most likely they don't know what a very wonderful state it is.

I am not fortunate enough to be a Georgian by birth but I am by proxy. Through my childhood I have been taught to love and appreciate all that Georgia means. Georgia, to me, is so many little things that only people who know her understand. She is a friendly, gracious state. She is famous for her many great statesmen, authors and military leaders. Her capital, Atlanta, is one of the most modern cities in the south. All in all, an excellent state in which to live.

The Gallup Poll may have named California as the most popular state in the union but Georgia will always rank first in my esteem.

MADELINE PARKER.
Greensboro, N. C.

Let's Go, Girls!

Editor Constitution: I have just read the article on the subject "Ship Wives Overseas."

It has aroused my indignation as well as a thousand more Army wives that are really Army wives. I am in favor of this bill being passed 100 per cent and I believe you will find many more that feel the same. I feel that the government should let those that want to go over go. It's true we would have hardships, many of them, but we have them over here as well. I'd rather be in France where my husband is right now than here in Atlanta waiting for his return.

Yes, we would be under military strain; to be exact, Army discipline. But what's so bad about that. I've been under it before. My husband being a regular Army man I know the hardships they endure and many more regular Army wives will see it my way, too.

These guys that spilled their opinion in this write up aren't married. They don't know the loneliness we feel at all. After all we aren't getting any younger, either.

MRS. O. J. NIXON.
Atlanta.

Charles J. Bloch Discusses Bar Bills

(Editor's Note: The Georgia Bar Association is sponsoring a program of judiciary reform in the current general assembly. At the request of The Constitution, Bar Association President Charles J. Bloch, of Macon, has written a special article outlining the purposes of proposed changes.)

As finally presented to the general assembly, the legislative program sponsored by the Georgia Bar Association embraced the following bills:

1. To grant to superior courts power to render declaratory judgments.
2. The creation of a judicial council.
3. To grant to the supreme court the power to prescribe rules of procedure for trial courts and rules of appellate practice.
4. To revise the trust laws of the state.
5. To provide for a petition to superior courts before sales under powers in deeds to secure debts would be considered final (foreclosure bill).
6. To provide for the transmission of acts of the general assembly by the secretary of state to the clerks of the superior courts of each county within 30 days of their approval by the Governor.
7. To provide that sheriffs and their deputies may serve civil process in any county of the state.
8. To require foreign corporations doing business in the state to file a copy of their charter with the secretary of state, and designate an agent upon whom process may be served.
9. To grant to the supreme court the right to grant supersedeas in cases pending before it.
10. Retirement of superior court judges.
11. To provide for the appointment of a probation officer in each judicial circuit.
12. To incorporate the bar of Georgia.
13. To provide that the rule may be adopted by the supreme court regulating the holding of bar examinations so that such examinations may be held in not more than three cities of the state and may last more than one day.

Four Enacted Of these 13 bills, four have been passed by the senate and the house, have been signed by the Governor and are now the law. One of these laws is rather technical in its nature but it nevertheless fills a need long required to be filled. Under that law (the Civil Process Act), a sheriff or his deputy of any county in the state may serve civil process in any other county. Parties and their counsel need no longer resort to the use of "second originals."

Another of these laws provides that the secretary of state shall within 30 days of the approval of a general law, send a copy of it to each clerk of the superior court in the state. Under present practice, the bound volume of laws does not reach the general public until approximately six months after the adjournment of the general assembly.

The other two bills now enacted into law are of far-reaching importance—the declaratory judgment law and the law conferring upon the supreme court the right to prescribe rules of procedure in trial courts and rules for appellate practice.

The declaratory judgment law has been sought by the Georgia Bar Association for 11 years. Similar laws are of force in 41 states of the Union. There is also a federal law on the subject, applicable only when the jurisdiction of the federal courts may otherwise be legally invoked. Under this law, in cases of actual controversy or in other cases where the ends of justice require it, the superior courts have power upon petition to declare rights and other legal relations. Space does not permit a detailed discussion of the good which will be accomplished by this law. Suffice it to say that heretofore a citizen of Georgia, doubtful of his rights under a contract or being placed in any other situation the legal status of which was in doubt, had to take a step in the dark and then turn on the light to see if he had stepped into a hole. Now he may, by use of the declaratory judgment law, turn on the light and then take his step.

Opportunity The statute conferring the rule-making power on the supreme court offers the greatest opportunity for the adoption of a modern code of court procedure which has been presented to the people of Georgia since the adoption of the Uniform Procedure Act of 1893. The supreme court, aided by a committee of actively practicing attorneys, is authorized to formulate rules of procedure, pleading and practice in civil proceedings and rules for appeal or review in all cases, civil and criminal. These rules will not have the force of law until they shall have been approved by a subsequent session of the general assembly. This last provision may be criticized. I am confident, however, that when the justices of our highest court, laboring unselfishly, and aided by attorneys representative of the bar of Georgia, prepare such rules, that those rules will be adopted by our general assembly. Our first code of 1861, and all subsequent codes, have been similarly prepared and adopted. (Continued tomorrow.)

Nations Must Unite To Win World Peace

No matter how individual understanding or opinion about the war varies, there is one basic fact self-evident to everybody. That is, Germany and Japan could not be defeated if it were not that the free nations of the world are united. The one, outstanding, great fact is the United Nations. Together we shall eliminate both Germany and Japan as threats to future world peace. Alone, the brutal Nazis and the Nips would, ere this, have conquered and enslaved the world.

It is just as difficult a task, probably more difficult, to win the peace as it has been to win the war. And it is just as true that we cannot win that peace—which means ending war for all the discernable future—unless we act as United Nations, as it is that we could not win the war save as United Nations.

The groundwork for creation of the great force for peace represented in a United Nations formed of all free countries in the world, has been laid. At the Dumbarton Oaks conference the framework for such a world organization was set up. Backed by overwhelming public opinion, both our houses of congress have gone on record as favoring such an organization; the house in the Fulbright resolution, the senate in the Connally resolution.

There is to be held, at San Francisco on April 25, a further world conference, a conference which is expected to advance along the road to fruition the plans laid at Dumbarton Oaks. It is of vital importance that public opinion, the final arbiter of this nation's destinies, be heard so plainly that the San Francisco conference delegates from the United States shall know, beyond peradventure of doubt, that the people of the United States will accept no breakdown in the program of world security through world unity and world co-operation.

Public opinion must, also, make itself so impressive upon all members of the United States senate that that body, which must ratify by two-thirds majority any treaty of peace finally reached, and any decision for U. S. participation in world organization or world court, will know emphatically how the people, the senate's constituents and masters, feel.

We Have Example There is striking similarity, on larger scale, between these modern-day beginnings of a lasting United Nations, and the beginnings of the union between the original states, in this country, which resulted in the great United States of America of today.

Each of those 13 states enacted tariff laws against the goods and products of the others. They were quarrelsome, jealous and, in more than one instance, there were flareups of armed conflict between citizens of one state and another.

But, the fathers of the nation, in their wisdom, met once more and drew up that constitution which has since been the envy of other nations and the blueprint for freedom all over the world.

The nation, founded upon that constitution, was not yet over its troubles. It was foreordained that it should be one nation, but it was a long time before it became "united" in fact. It took a great war, the War Between the States, to determine once and for all that the union of the states was to be permanent.

It Will Not Be Easy The creation of a workable, acceptable United Nations of the World, to live together in harmony, to know security from hunger and from the fear of war, will take long and patient years. Perhaps even longer than it took to complete the task of creating a truly United States of America.

But it can be done. And, not in this generation, but in some blessed era of the future, the great dream will become reality.

It will call for understanding among all men and all races of the basic human brotherhood of all. It will call for free commercial intercourse wherever men's ships and planes can travel. It will call for the elimination of national greeds and covetousness, for the end of jealous tariff walls, for free interchange of goods, of raw materials and of peoples. It will be necessary that we all learn that poverty in one part of the world inevitably means unpleasant reaction in all others.

But no matter how many old prejudices, old jealousies, old nationalisms we have to relinquish, if it keeps the world at peace it will be worth while. For, if world war three ever comes, it will be the end. The end of civilization, the end of humankind. There will be none left, after world war three, to work for peace or for any other cause.

We Did It Before—

GEORGIA EDITORS SAY:

"CARTHAGO DELENDA EST"
(Walker County Messenger)

It is an indictment upon the sincerity of those senators and representatives in the Georgia General Assembly, who claim their desire is to serve the will of the people of their counties and the state, when they block a measure like home rule.

For more than 13 years a home rule bill has been introduced in the body, and each time has been defeated. No sound reasons have ever been advanced why. The veiled excuse is that it will rob the members of trade and barter powers.

Looks very much now like the home rule will again go down in defeat. Bills, the vast majority of which are purely of county or town application, measures affecting these localities only, continue to be poured into the hopper to take up the time of the whole body, at the epense of the taxpayers.

The legislators either in their refusal to give the people of the state an opportunity by their vote to say whether or not they want home rule, are afraid that the people will vote overwhelmingly for it (as a matter of fact, not a single member can fail to know that the people would vote it), or they take the position that the people do not know what's to their best interest and are acting for them.

The question has not perhaps reached an acute stage in the state yet, but the sentiment in every county for home rule is rising and in some localities to the point of demanding that something be done about it. More interest is now being shown in the measure than ever before, and that interest will not wane, but grow more and more. In fact, the time will come when we will have home rule in Georgia, because there are those who will keep hammering away at it, and more and more people will become actively interested in it.

Never did Cato make a speech in the Roman senate that he didn't conclude, it is said, with the words, "Carthago Delenda Est," Carthage must be destroyed. And after years Carthage was destroyed. There are those in Georgia who will never cease their fight for home rule in Georgia until it is a law, and our prediction is that some day Georgians will send to the legislature those who will carry out the wishes of the people, and we will have home rule.

This legislature may fail us at this point, but it is not going to be long until members of the body are going to be loosed from this dictatorial power and will serve the will of the people. It could be an issue in the next gubernatorial race and may be.

Anyway, we have waited many years and we can wait a few more; in the meantime the people will be working away at the job to give local units in the state a chance at local self-government.

EXPERIMENT STATION
(Albany Herald)

It must have been with great pride that George H. King, director, showed the board of regents of the University System of Georgia over the Coastal Plains Experiment Station.

In the years which have passed since its founding it has grown from 206 acres to over 5,000 acres, with 101 buildings.

The station has contributed a great deal to agriculture in south Georgia and has carried on valuable research work.

Livestock is playing a vital part in the economy of this section, one which is increasing in value each year. Stock raising is closely connected with pastures, and the development of grasses and fertilizing of pastures at the experiment station have done much to develop the cattle industry.

Research work of the station has also helped greatly in the growing and marketing of tobacco and grains.

There is much of interest to see at the station. It is playing an important part in our farm program.

JACK TARVER

Teachers Available In Any Back Seat

A New York educator proposes that the nation's high schools inaugurate courses in auto driving for the benefit of underprivileged children of the A-card set.

Shortly now, one supposes, Junior will be coming home with a report card giving him "D" in arithmetic, English and deportment . . . but an "A-plus" in shifting gears.

This is a changing world, all right. But who'd have thought they'd ever change the 3-R's to reading, 'riting and riding?

The curriculum of the new schools, in addition to classroom lectures, would undoubtedly include laboratory sessions at S-curves and grade crossings.

They may even carry the idea further, setting up a graduate school and offering Ph. D.'s in chauffeuring to those who have taken advanced courses in mental telepathy and foreign languages and thus know what the lady driver up ahead is going to do and are able to express themselves adequately on the subject.

It's a great idea. I can hardly wait for the day when, having run head-on into another ten-ton truck, the driver, somberly bedecked in cap and gown, climbs down to demand: "OK, freshman, where's your diploma?"

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

Prejudice Rules Too Many Congressmen

WASHINGTON.—The criticism is often made of congress that a majority of its members vote according to their prejudices rather than from any intelligent analysis of the matter under consideration.

Nothing better illustrates the truth of that statement than the vote taken in the lower house on recommitting the George bill, which was designed to pave the way for the confirmation of former Vice President Wallace as secretary of commerce by divorcing all federal lending agencies from the jurisdiction of the department.

The George bill did a clean job of stripping these agencies from the department. It took them all away—lock, stock and barrel. Not one was left.

But the Republicans, bent on politics and aided by a few disgruntled southern Democrats, sought to go a step further. They demanded that the bill be amended to make the secretary of commerce ineligible to sit as a director on the board of the Export-Import Bank, another of the giant government lending agencies.

They wanted to remove the bank from all jurisdiction of the department.

Also, they insisted on amending the War Powers Act in such a way that the President in the future would have no authority to transfer the lending agencies back to the Department of Commerce, as he did at the time Jesse Jones was named secretary of commerce.

Paul Brown Now, the fallacy and the pretense of all of this was exploded in a carefully delivered speech on the floor by Rep. Paul Brown, of Georgia, just before the house voted on recommittal of the bill.

Rep. Brown, the ranking majority member of the Banking and Currency Committee which reported out the George bill, went to some pains to explain that the secretary of commerce has absolutely no jurisdiction over affairs of the Export-Import Bank.

The bank, he pointed out, is in the hands of Leo T. Crowley, foreign economic administrator, "who controls all the stock and appoints all the members of the board of trustees."

"Wallace is not on the board," he reminded the house. "He is not on it today, and would not automatically become a member by being confirmed as secretary of commerce. . . . The Export-Import Bank is not in the Commerce Department."

As for the War Powers Act, which it was proposed to amend by sending the bill back to the Banking and Currency Committee, Mr. Brown pointed out that that was a subject over which his committee had absolutely no jurisdiction. The judiciary committee is the house body having authority over such legislation.

And yet the Republicans were seeking to recommit the bill to the banking committee. Why? For the obvious reason that they hoped thus to kill the George bill, feeling that this would be a sure way of defeating the Wallace nomination.

Slap at FDR Moreover, the house was reminded further that any attempt to amend the War Powers Act was a gratuitous slap at the President, since Mr. Roosevelt had already pledged himself to sign the George bill and accept its provisions for taking the lending agencies away from commerce.

To amend the act as proposed under those circumstances would be equivalent to saying to the President: "We don't believe you."

Thus, as Rep. Brown so ably pointed out, the two amendments insisted upon by the Republicans were entirely meaningless and to no purpose, save only to embarrass the Wallace nomination.

In the face of these facts, consider the vote taken on recommitting the bill. It was 204 to 196. In other words, 196 members were still willing to recommit the bill despite the utter emptiness of their position as pointed out by the Georgia congressman.

Now, what does a vote of that kind mean? Only one thing, of course. It means simply that those who were determined to send the bill back to committee in an effort to kill it were voting strictly out of prejudice. For one reason or another, political mostly, they were prejudiced against the Wallace nomination and were willing to resort to any means of blocking it.

Congress is too often like that.

Final proof that politics and prejudice were the determining factors in the recommittal vote is found in the fact that all but two house Republicans cast their ballots to send the bill back to committee. There is only one word for such solidarity: prejudice or hypocrisy.

THOMAS L. STOKES

Same Tactics May Block Peace Again

WASHINGTON.—Cmdr. Harold Stassen came back from the Pacific strengthened in his belief in the necessity of an international security organization to stop aggressors and to keep the peace.

This was, as he explained it, for two reasons: First, because of what he saw of war and its havoc; and, second, because of the demonstrated effectiveness of air and naval forces for policing, such as is planned for the projected international organization to check aggression.

It is with these strong convictions that he will serve as a member of the American delegation to the United Nations conference at San Francisco in late April.

Cmdr. Stassen has a great admiration for the young Americans fighting this war.

"I don't believe you can have any conception," he said, "of the invincible spirit of the wise-cracking, high-spirited young American fighter."

He told of his visit to a hospital. He talked to one youngster who had lost a leg. As he was leaving the young man looked up through the pulleys and contraptions about his bed with a broad, brave smile and said:

"I'll see you back home in the States and I'll show you what you can do with a wooden leg."

"It's the invincible spirit of American youth," Cmdr. Stassen added, "and it should be used in peace as it is in war."

Though he will attend the conference as a civilian, Cmdr. Stassen certainly will be a spokesman for these young Americans. He will be so recognized. He will carry the hopes of the young men for some machinery to keep the peace, so there will not be another one of these holocausts for their sons.

It is inspiring to listen to the commander, himself still a young man at 38, and it has been inspiring to see the general friendly reaction in this country to the Crimea conference from which came the decision to go forward with plans for a security organization at San Francisco.

But the little disturbing voices are beginning to be heard. You hear them at the capitol, from the floor and in the lobbies, picking at this and that. It's Poland and the Polish settlement now. Later, it will be the problems of other small nations which have national groups here, especially in our larger urban areas. There are votes there, and members of congress angle for them, as was demonstrated to a nauseating degree in the last election. Both parties were guilty, nationally and locally. They won't let these people be Americans, nor will some of their own professional leaders let them be Americans.

The danger is that these voices add up, in time, and become a sort of angry chorus, with more noise than real substance when you consider the whole American people. They form alliances and blocs, they seek reservations, just as happened 25 years ago when the League of Nations was defeated by the senate.

There's a frank confession of this on record by one of the participants in that battle 25 years ago—former Sen. James E. Watson—which it is well to ponder now. In his autobiography, Sen. Watson tells how Sen. Lodge, Massachusetts, Republican leader and chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, called him in about 30 days after the senate began to debate the Treaty of Versailles and asked him to be his special representative to organize the fight against the league. The Indiana senator writes of his talk with Mr. Lodge:

" 'Senator,' I said to him, 'I don't see how we are ever going to defeat this proposition. It appears to me that 80 per cent of the people are for it. Fully that percentage of the preachers are right now advocating it, churches are very largely favoring it, all the people who have been burdened and oppressed by this awful tragedy of war and who imagine this opens a way to build peace are for it, and I don't see how it is possible to defeat it.'

"He turned to me and said:

" 'Ah, my dear James, I do not propose to try to beat it by direct frontal attack, but by the indirect method of reservations.' "

Then he told the Indiana senator how he would propose reservations on this and that to attract support from various groups.

It worked 25 years ago.

It could work again, unless the people watch out.

Valentines Grow On Trees in Georgia

THOMASTON.—It was all very sad. Owing to the paper shortage, there would be no Valentines this year, we were told; there were no red satin boxes of chocolates because the candy was needed overseas. The young people moped and the middle-aged sighed, and everyone promptly forgot all about it. After all, Valentines were a bit adolescent, and they were decidedly Victorian with all that lace-paper-and-red-ribbon business.

And so it happened that while in the pursuit of perfectly legitimate business we came on Feb. 14 to Fort Valley, Ga., and the Massey Lane farm of David Strother. There, in simply breathtaking array appeared—not one gorgeous tree or bush—but several hundred trees filled to overflowing with living valentines. There were solid red ones, with just a sprinkling of white robbon (Donckllarri, read one label; Eleanor of Fairoaks another and Adolph Audusson a third); and pink ones frilled with white lace paper (Hermes—Sport No. 3 was the prosaic name of this); solid white with a bit of gold run through the heart like an arrow (Snowdrift); solid pink with an occasional strip of red ribbon (Marchioness of Exeter). There were centers made of a grill of lace, others with a cluster of satin loops and some were as smoothly pink as a young girl's cheek. Valentines. They grow on trees in Georgia—and the botanical name is camellia japonica.

To the majority of persons a camellia is a flower; but to some (who have developed a lifelong passion for this most temperamental but incomparable plant) a flower is necessarily a camellia. Let others have their dahlias, their roses, gladioli, even their hundreds of varieties of iris. The Jane Cowl dahlia, President Hoover rose, Picardi gladiolus and Desert Gold iris may arouse emotions of joy in some breasts—but not among camellia worshippers. The sacred hierarchy of camellias begins with Akebono and runs through Vedrine. Whisper the word "Lotus," or "Ping Star" or "Lady Mary Cromatie" in the presence of a camellia grower, and the result is as electrifying as the mention of Dewey in the Union League Club in New York.

Now the camellia was not always so popular or so highly regarded in the south. When I was a school girl, I was not at all impressed by the red or the "splotched" japonica which some of the girls brought to school in winter; almost everyone had a tree of the pink-and-white splotched ones in their front yard, either on the right or the left of the porch steps. It was kind of handy to have them in case anybody died in February—and somebody always did, it was a bad month for dying of pneumonia, pleurisy, old age or Bright's disease—and the deceased was not sufficiently prominent to justify the expense of ordering a wreath from an Atlanta florist. The flowers were nice, too, for D. A. R. meetings, the Domino Club, and the speaker's table at lyceum entertainments. They could stand almost any amount of cold weather, and though nobody knew or cared, they were usually of the Sarah Frost variety. So far as the majority of us knew, they were simply japonicas; and there was only one other kind—the solid red.

Things went along like that for years. We scarcely suspected that the blossoms worn in literature by "The Lady of the Camellias" were related to our japonicas. But strange things were happening; our ordinary cape jessamines were doing very well in the north under the name of gardenias. Magnolia Gardens near Charleston was annually attracting visitors from all parts of the world; and one spring when we went to see the abaleas in bloom there, we arrived just as the last petals were dropping from the famous Drayton camellias.

At Wormsloe, too, in Savannah some late varieties remained long in bloom that year, blossoms fair enough to steal away the hearts of half the beauty lovers in Georgia. This is the proper setting for them: near an old southern mansion, in a garden down whose paths Lafayette and Trackeray and Joseph E. Johnston once walked, beneath gnarled trees of pine and live oak whose boughs, of course, are moss-hung; let there be pools or streams of slow moving water to reflect the beauty of the blossoms, and a bench near by to sit on while you ponder for a moment upon the various futile activities of man.

The late winter sunshine will be warm, and you'll find Peace sitting there beside you on the bench. If you aren't humble, too, in the presence of those exquisite blossoms—so perfect, so delicate, yet blooming for the most part in the midst of winter's dreariness—then you ought to be.

An admiration for the blossoms is not necessarily enobling to its professor. Women who pay their church dues regularly have been known to steal cuttings from their neighbor's choicest plants. And when a "graft" produces a new variety that is superior to the parent, owners frequently stop just short of calling out the state militia for protection.

Garden clubs who have beautified the highways of their towns by planting these bushes have been disillusioned to find not only blossoms broken off, but whole plants uprooted and stolen. For their beauty? Unfortunately, no—often because of mistaken ideas of their value.

Guests at Mr. Strother's beautiful gardens have been heard asking the overseer, "Now what is the most expensive variety he has? I've heard that he has one plant which he bought in California for $700. Which one is that?"

Mr. Strother has, indeed, many rare plants: one from France that had to be shipped, because of regulations, without any soil around it; others from Japan; one which is unique—absolutely the only one of its kind in the world, the blossoms blending from deep red to lavendar. Another of his loveliest varieties cannot be bought at nurseries but he has given many cuttings from it to his friends.

A hobby for the wealthy? Not necessarily. Raising camellias is just an old Georgia custom; "we know them when" they were mere japonicas.

ERNIE PYLE

U. S. Has Done Thrilling Job

IN THE MARIANAS ISLANDS. You may wonder why we have American troops at all here in the Marianas Islands, since we are 1,500 miles away from the Philippines, China or Japan itself.

Well, it's because in this Pacific war of vast water distances, we have to make gigantic bases of each group of islands we take, in order to build up supplies and preparations for future invasions farther on.

The Marianas happen to be a sort of crossroads in the Western Pacific. Stuff can go either west or north from here. Whoever hits in the Marianas can have his finger on the whole wide web of the war.

Thus the Marianas are becoming the heart of the Pacific war. Our naval and military leaders make no bones about it, for the Japs know it anyhow, but they're too far away to do anything about it.

The Marianas are both thrilling and engaging right now. Scores of thousands of troops of all kinds are here. Furious building is going on. Planes arrive on schedule from all directions as though this were Chicago airport—only they've come thousands of miles over water. Convoys unload unbelievable tonnages.

These islands will hum throughout the war and they will never return to their former placid life, for we are building on almost every inch of useable land.

Supplies in staggering quantities are being stacked up here for future use. You can take your pick of K-rations or lumber or bombs, and you'd find enough of either to feed a city, build one, or blow it up.

Fleets can base here between engagements. Combat troops train here. Other troops come back to rest. Great hospitals are set up for our future wounded. Pipelines criss-cross the islands. Trucks bumper to bumper dash forward as though they were on the western front. Ox-cart trails turn almost overnight into four-lane macadam highways for military traffic.

There is no blackout in the islands. If raiders come the lights are turned off, but they seldom come any more. The Marianas are a pretty safe place now.

Great long macadam airstrips are in operation and others are being laid. The Marianas are the set for some of our B-29 bomber fleets which will grow and grow and grow.

Thousands of square tents, thousands of curved steel quonset ruts, thousands of huge, permanent warehouses and office buildings dot the islands.

Lights burn all night and the roar of planes, the clank of bulldozers and the clatter of hammers is constant. It is a strange contrast to the stillness that dwelt amidst this greenery for so many centuries.

There are 15 islands in this chain, running due north and south. They string out a total distance of more than 400 miles. We are on the southern end.

We hold only three islands, but they are the biggest and the only three that count. The other islands are completely "neutralized" by the occupancy of these three.

There are a few Japs living on some of the others, but there's nothing they can do to harm us. The islands we haven't bothered with are small and worthless. Most of them have no inhabitants at all.

The islands we took are Guam, Tinian and Saipan. Guam had been ours for many years before Japan took it away from us just after Pearl Harbor. Tinian and Saipan had been Japnese since the last war. We took the whole batch last summer.

Guam is the biggest, and southernmost. Tinian and Saipan are right together, 120 miles north of Guam. You can fly up there in less than an hour, and our transport planes shuttle back and forth several times daily on regular schedule. They have to make a "dogleg" around the island of Rota, about half way up, for there are still Japs on it with .50-caliber machine guns, and they'll shoot at you.

I've been on all three of our islands, and I must admit two things—that I like it here, and that you can't help but be thrilled by what the Americans are doing.

And from all I've picked up so far, I think it can be said that most Americans like the Marianas islands, assuming they have to be away from home at all.

The savage heat and the dread diseases and the awful jungles of the more southern Pacific islands do not exist here. The climate is good, the islands are pretty, and the native chamorros are nice people.

Health conditions among our men are excellent. They work in shorts or without shirts and are deeply tanned. The mosquito and fly problem has been licked. There is almost no venereal disease. Food is good. The weather is always warm but not cruelly hot. Almost always a breeze is blowing. Anywhere you look, you have a pretty view.

Yes, the islands are a paradise and life here is fine—except it's empty and there is no diversion and the monotony eventually gnaws at you.

Information In Her Mail

"I didn't realize till I read your column entitled 'The Doctor Is In—Please Be Seated' just how much time is wasted in doctors' reception rooms," writes Mrs. M. C. Bogan, of Marietta.

And with that southpaw sort of compliment Mrs. Bogan went on to enlist our aid in a campaign to conserve the man and womanpower hours spent waiting to see the doctor and turn it into labor for the war effort.

The sick and near-sick citizens who spend hours sitting in a doctor's outer office waiting to tell him their troubles or, more often waiting to let him stick a needle in Sister or Junior, would have a better time and probably feel a lot better if they were usefully occupied while they waited, Mrs. Bogan avers.

"I'm not sure just what could be accomplished but I'm sure a great deal might be done if people got interested," she went on. She suggests interviewing the Red Cross and enlisting the aid of doctor's receptionists in distributing knitting or sewing among the woman patients. Bandage rolling is a good clean indoor sport but might be difficult to launch until some system were evolved for scrubbing up and capping and gowning the patients before they tackled bandages which must be sterile.

Making scrapbooks for children's hospitals, filling Red Cross kits, and knitting and sewing are more reliable occupations for the bored reception-room sitters, Mrs. Bogan feels.

If all this activity makes the prospective patients feel as good as Mrs. Bogan thinks it will we can just see scores of ailing citizens putting in their stint in the reception room and leaving completely cured—without ever having seen the doctor. And think of the money saved—and the help to the Red Cross!

Then there is a letter from Pfc. D. D. Davenport bringing us courteously but firmly to task for a half-expressed opinion on the subject of conjuring away varts.

"I beg to disagree with you in your attitude toward the removal of warts by conjuring," writes Pfc. Davenport. "Conjuring in the removal or relief of the common wart (verruca vulgaris) or the juvenile wart (verruca plana juvenilis) has a sound scientific basis," our correspondent continues and goes on to quote no less an authority than S. William Becker and Maximillian E. Obermayer, authors of a dermatology and sypilology textbook, on the subject.

Generally speaking, the quotes were 'way over our head but the gist of it seemed to be that conjuring has a dignified name known in medical circles as "suggestive therapy" and carefully controlled experiments have "demonstrated the efficacy of suggestive therapy in 44 per cent of verrucae vulgares and in 88 per cent of cases of verrucae juvenilis."

Pfc. Davenport sums it up this way: "Warts are caused by a filtrable virus, but are in some way influenced by the nervous system. Of course, the ceremony per se in conjuring does not effect the disappearance of the wart, but the psychological effect upon the individual. Conjuring is of value in relieving various skin, as well as other, diseases which are caused wholly or partially by neurocirculatory instability."

Pfc. Davenport is a junior in the Emory University school of medicine.

Incidentally, those people who telephoned inquiries about locating and recognizing sourwood sticks, which we were told would scare away cold and bronchitis germs, haven't a thing on us. At least, our friend Elizabeth, who told us of the cure and provided the sourwood sticks, made the presentation with this proviso: "If they don't work, they're not sourwood!"

Take it from the mother of three barking, sniffly nosed children, they are not sourwood.

Just a Rhyme a Day

". . . . it is axiomatic, almost to the point of triteness, that most people think they would be happier if engaged in some other occupation."—Excerpt from article, "Know What You Do Best."

When Noah cast his weather eye where storms and rains were brewing
He wasted little time in thought and he was up and doing,
With forty days and forty nights ahead when skies were weeping,
He had to have a sheltered spot to do a lot of sleeping.
And though the work was not the kind with which he was contented,
He knew he had to do it or he'd be the "late lamented."
Necessity, the whip and goad, drives all, the smart and lazy,
To work they are unfitted for and sets them nearly crazy;
'Tis then we look with envious eyes upon the lesser labors
Performed by folks we do not know, or lucky friends and neighbors—
The smithy stands beneath that tree and pumps his blowing bellows
And thinks how happy he would be to work like other fellows,
To have a desk and cushioned chair, to sit and chat with cronies,
And never have to shoe a mare, a mule or fractious ponies.
The engineer peers from his cab at fields of fig and thistle
And wishes he could farm and never toot another whistle.
The patients pastor takes his text and makes a fine oration
And frets because its wasted on a sleeping congregation,
And oftentimes we think we might do better building hearses
Or driving trucks instead of wasting time on silly verses.
Though most of us are sure we might do other duties better,
Like Noah, we must build our arks to keep from getting wetter.

SECURING THE KINGDOM.

If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?—Psalm 11:3.

One's code of conduct and one's conduct are not dependent upon the social conditions of the times. "The Business Life of Abraham" was the sermon theme of the Rev. W. M. Taylor, once pastor of Broadway Tabernacle, New York City. He showed how in all Abraham's dealings—those with Lot concerning land, with the king of Sodom, with sellers of the cave of Machpelah—he was above reproach. In like manner, and with much more encouragement than he had, can we transact the business in which we are engaged. However unfriendly to justice the situation may be, your integrity and mine will go far toward securing the reign of God.

Heavenly Father, inspire us to create the kind of society we desire. May ours be the victory of faith through fellowship with Thy Son our Lord.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

Let's Have a County Manager

Proof of the pressing need for an executive head to administer the affairs of Fulton county was in full evidence at a recent meeting of the county commissioners when two out of five members were absent on personal business.

One was in court trying a murder case; the other was in Florida attending to private business matters.

Here was a concrete example that the commissioners must of necessity give most of their time to their own affairs—which is understandable when men are successful in business. If they weren't, we wouldn't want them as commissioners. But it brings home the point that county affairs must be secondary.

Administration of these affairs is becoming more and more time-consuming as government becomes more and more complex. It is demanding too much of the commissioners' time. Day and night they are asked by taxpayers to execute such chores as removing dead dogs, placing relatives in the almshouse, patching muddy roads and disposing of garbage.

And aside from these extra-curricular activities, they must each month attend many meetings which last from two to four hours and often far into the night.

There is only one answer to the problem: a county manager.

Under the manager plan, which has been indorsed by numerous grand juries, by the Reed report, by the Atlanta Local government commission, by the Atlanta League of Women Voters and by two ex-county commissioners upon their voluntary retirement from office, a full-time executive would be hired by the commissioners to take complete charge of running the county. He would be strictly accountable to the five commissioners and would carry out the policies outlined by them.

Fulton county is an almost $5,000,000-a-year concern. Responsibility for administering it should be concentrated in the hands of one competent, full-time person. This is sound business philosophy. And sound business is the basis on which public as well as private affairs should be run.

The county commissioners now have under consideration a resolution asking the Fulton legislative delegates to pass a bill installing a county manager. A joint meeting of the delegates and the commissioners will be held Saturday to discuss the matter. Conclusive action should be taken while there is still time to get a bill passed in the general assembly.

For years the voters and taxpayers of Fulton county have spoken unequivocably in favor of a manager system. Now is the time for their elected representatives to carry out their expressed wishes.

Smart Operation Three years ago the Southern League voluntarily sliced travel 33 1-3 per cent by reducing the number of trips around the circuit from three to two a season.

Voluntarily, Southern League directors voted to train at home, regardless of weather conditions. They took cognizance of the fact that such a move would relieve crowded housing facilities in southern towns adjacent to Army camps.

The Southern League directors never asked for permission to go to Washington, which seems a very popular thing to do nowadays. They figured that if the directors of manpower, travel and other war agencies didn't want baseball to continue, they'd cut it out.

As a result, Southern League baseball has proceeded without a hitch. Individual club owners, even on the longer trips, have sent their teams by day coach. And a day coach ride from Atlanta to Little Rock, Ark., is nothing to contemplate with a great amount of pleasure. Especially when a team arrives around noon on Sunday to play a double-header that afternoon.

But the smartness of the Southern League directors has paid dividends. Reduction of travel by 33 1-2 per cent, home training, and day coach travel have undoubtedly met with the full approval of the directors of war agencies in this country.

The Southern League still has its all-star game, too.

Most Southern League teams open the gates to servicemen. There has been no possible loophole for criticism of the continuance of baseball in Dixie.

One hundred per cent co-operation with the war effort has been the aim—and result—of Southern League directors' efforts.

The major league directors, instead of condoning trips to Washington, might well do what the Southern League has done. Our directors didn't know where they stood, either. But they reasoned that so long as there was no government directive to the contrary, what they were doing must be considered worth while in relation to the war effort.

Why bother war-busy Washington with baseball matters at this time?

Brown's Contract Just the other day, noting that such prominent college coaches as Paul Brown, Jack Meagher, Jim Crowley and Buck Shaw had been signed by professional football within a year's time, it was suggested here that postwar competition between the colleges and the pros conceivably might be terrific.

Paul Brown's loyalty to Ohio State was well known. Some followers of the college game wondered how he could afford to leave the Buckeyes for a pro job.

It was suggested recently that the opportunity to make money was the only logical answer. The inside story of the financial terms, as related by a midwestern newspaper, is almost incredible.

The new All-America Conference of Football (Arch Ward's league) is making rapid progress. All the above named coaches are affiliated with the new circuit. Soldiers' Field, Chicago, for the exclusive use of the games was obtained on a long-term lease the other day.

To make the coaching offer so attractive that Lt. Cmdr. Paul Brown, of Great Lakes, couldn't refuse, Cleveland taxi magnate, Arthur McBride, is reputed to have extended a contract calling for $25,000 a year for five years. But, best of all, the contract pays $1,000 monthly while Brown remains with the Navy. He'll make $12,000 a year additional as he serves his country.

No college could match that. Only a few years ago Brown hardly was making $3,000 a year as a high school coach. Probably $12,000 was the top figure he earned at Ohio State.

The new pro football conference is not sparing the horses.

And, naturally, at these salary figures, the promoters can get any name college coach they want, with few exceptions.

There are, quite naturally, some college coaches who don't need the money and prefer to retain their old affiliations.

But the big money being flourished by the All-America Conference undeniably is a magnet for coaches who are seeking a short cut to financial security.

Outstanding Work Rules are rules in amateur athletics of this country. They are not made to be broken. For instance, if it were suggested that a boy like Lt. Danny Yates, USN, were doing a great job of teaching golf to servicemen at the rehabilitation center at Asheville, N. C., it might jeopardize his amateur standing.

Danny actually isn't teaching. He is in charge of the athletic program and word comes through of the progress he has made in a little more than a year.

The former Atlanta and Georgia golfing ace and Georgia Tech player has scoured the countryside for golfing equipment and has, by dint of exhaustive work, obtained the clubs and golf balls needed.

It has meant a lot in the Asheville rehabilitation center. It has given the men a new contact with the old life and, at the same time, has been of tremendous value in restoring them to good health.

Golf, once branded as an "old man's game," will enjoy a greater popularity among the nation's youth after the war.

For golf has been one of the sporting diversions in many of the camps. Courses have been thrown open to servicemen at practically no cost. Clubs have been made available for a small rental fee. Many young men who never gave the game a second thought before have found much pleasure in golf in off hours.

A great increase in golf play naturally would reduce the cost of the game, which has been one of the bars up to now.

Typists Meet Russell Tonight

By RUSSELL MUSGRAVE

With the NGIC pre-tournament title awaiting the winner, the Russell Wildcats and Commercial Typists will stage one of the bitterest cage struggles of the season on the Wildcats' court in the battle that follows the girl's 7:30 o'clock tilt between the two schools.

Commercial defeated the Wildcats in their Feb. 6 game, 40-30, but had to come from behind in the closing moments of the first half to do so. In that game, Phillip Froug and Ben Edelstein staged a brilliant two-man passing attack for the Typists.

Although both teams will have the same number of losses if Commercial drops this one to the Wildcats, Russell will win the title with 13 wins to Commercial's 10. But if the Typists defeat Russell tonight they are the champions with 11 wins and one loss to the Wildcats' 12 wins and three losses.

ASA, Boys' High Swimmers Meet

The boys' team of the Atlanta Swimming Association will meet Boys' High in a competitive dual swimming meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock, at Emory University. This marks the first meet for the Purple team, while the A. S. A. boys tied Druid Hills last week.

Druid Hills will meet Tech High Monday at 4:45 p. m. at Emory.

These meets mark the beginning of the competitive swimming season for the schools in Atlanta and will point the way for the G. I A. A. championships usually held in May.

Purples Beat Richmond in GIAA Meet

GMA and Marist Both Are Beaten In Columbus Play

By CHARLIE ROBERTS
Constitution Staff Writer

COLUMBUS, Ga., Feb. 22.—Boys' High, of Atlanta, romped into the semifinal round of play in the GIAA basketball tournament here tonight when they encountered comparatively light competition in ousting Richmond Academy, of Augusta, 53 to 19.

The Purples, one of the favorites to cop the crown won in Atlanta last year by Columbus High's Blue Devils, ran up a 37-to-8 advantage in the first half. Coach Shorty Doyal used his regulars little more than half the contest.

Tommy Touchstone, high scoring Hurricane forward, topped the scorers with 18. Phil Upchurch and Buck Doyal were next on the winner's scoring list with 11 and 10 respectively.

Atlanta's other two entries, G. M. A. and Marist, were ushered out of the running by the co-host schools, Columbus and Jordan.

Jordan's Red Jackets easily trounced Marist, 61 to 32, and Columbus disposed of G. M. A.'s Cadets, 50 to 33.

In the Jordan-Marist contest, the Jackets raced out into a comfortable 29-to-8 lead at halftime and then coasted in with the substitutes doing most of the work in the second half. Gordon was high point man for the Red Jackets with 12. Causey was top man for the Cadets with a like number.

Lanier defeated Savannah, 49 to 26, in the final game and will meet Boys' High tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock.

MDTs Threat In State Meet

The Lawson Medical Technicians were overlooked by the seeding committee when the draw was made for the fifth annual state open basketball championships opening Sunday at Sports Arena, but that is not expected to retard their chances one bit when they take the floor against Robins Field A. S. C. Monday night at 8:30 o'clock.

The Technicians have won 28 out of 32 ball games so far this season. This is possibly the best record of any of the teams entered in the meet. If they get by Robins Field, the second seeded entry, the Technicians may romp on to the finals. A. S. F. Officers were ranked at the top of the list since they are the defending champions. Plenty of competition is expected to take place in the open division which also features such teams as Finney General Hospital's crack quintet, of Thomasville, Ga.; the Paratroopers, Fort Benning and Gainesville Navy, of Gainesville, Georgia.

Girl Cage Officials Clinic On Tonight

A basketball clinic for officials of girls' cage games will be held at the YWCA on Auburn avenue tonight and Saturday, two national judges attending to judge the officiating and grant ratings.

The clinic is designed primarily to train women to officiate girls' games, but men officials are also urged to attend in order that the general standard of officiating may be raised.

Tonight at 8 o'clock two games will be played, parts of which will be officiated by the national officials to demonstrate the correct procedure. Saturday morning at 9 a. m. there will be a written examination on rules followed by a practical exam for those who pass the written test.

Falcons Win Junior Optimist Cage Meet

The Falcons, a team composed of Murphy Junior High school students, last night won the Junior Optimist Club basketball tournament for Midget cage teams in Atlanta.

The Falcons defeated the Optimidgets, 50 to 17, in the final game.

NO WRESTLING CARD ON TONIGHT

There will be no wrestling program at the city auditorium tonight, Promoter Paul Jones announcing that he was giving the grapplers a rest this week.

Jones is still busy, however, trying to persuade Champion Wild Bill Longson to accept a match with Blockbuster Talun, the towering Polish giant, here next week. Talun moved into the front ranks of contenders for the Longson title when he defeated Chief Saunooke here last week, and Jones is anxious to give him his shot at the crown as soon as possible.

Decatur Wins From Druid Hills, 25 to 22

By WILLARD BARTLETT

Some of the exxcitement created during the roaring twenties was revived twofold last night as a thrill-packed crowd jammed into the little Fulton High gym to see Tucker, Decatur, Clarkston and Hapeville advance to the semifinals of the Fifth District basketball tourney.

Vieing for the finals tonight the Hapeville Hornets, a pretourney favorite, battles the fast Tucker outfit at 7:30 o'clock and Coach Bill Badgett's Decatur Bulldogs will offer the Clarkston High five a bit of fast competition in the 8:30 encounter.

Decatur and Druid Hills, two old rivals, kept fans rising constantly in one of the most interesting conflicts witnessed at a tourney in a decade. The Bulldogs finally managed to eke out a 25 to 22 decision, but not without a difficult struggle. The contest was a nip and tuck affair all the way with the Decatur lads holding a mere 10 to 9 lead at the halfway mark. Druid Hills' Copeland came through brilliantly in the third quarter to keep his team well in the ball game. The score was tied 18-all at this point, but Decatur broke through the enemy defense in the last period to march to victory.

Another thriller was presented by the Fulton Redbirds and Tucker with the latter grasping a 39 to 32 verdict. Tucker displayed a smooth five in reaching the semifinals with Chesnut mainly responsible for the triumph with 10 points. The DeKalb county outfit started fast, but was pushed hard during the last half by the Fulton quintet.

The Hapeville Hornets had little trouble downing Southwest DeKalb, 40 to 21. Robert Clayton entered the game late in the first quarter, and proved his worth to Hapeville as he recorded 12 points in addition to playing a good defensive game.

In the opening tilt Clarkston held Lithonia, 31 to 26. Bryant and Perrin played an excellent defensive game at forward for the winners with the Davidson brothers shining for the Lithonia club. B. Fowler did most of the scoring for the victors.

Georgia Loses Two Forwards

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 22.—Fred Hamby, Marietta, and Reid Moseley, Huntsville, Ala., forwards, will be riding the bench or attired in street clothes through no fault of their own when the Georgia Bulldogs are host to the high-riding Tech basket quintet here Saturday evening. Hamby, standing six feet two inches and one of Georgia's most able few at getting the ball off the backboard, suffered a sprained ankle while walking downstairs in the football dormitory.

Moseley, star football end who is a 4-F because of frequent asthma attacks, is held at bay by this ailment. Although there is a very slim chance that "Mose" will play Hamby has been pronounced out for sure.

Basketball Popular With Many Nations Of World Today

DALLAS, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Basketball will become popular throughout the world when peace is restored says James W. St. Clair, chairman of the National Rules Committee.

But, he adds there is considerable danger to the rules as a result and that will be the chief subject of discussion when the committee holds its annual meeting probably in New York next month.

"We've already granted one request for permission to publish our rules in French," said St. Clair. "We have other inquiries asking for the right to print the rules in Spanish, Portuguese and several other languages. Practically every country in South America has become interested in our game."

He declared this was only the beginning, judging by reports from all parts of the globe where Americans are in service.

"We who are charged with administration of the game through rules making naturally are gratified and elated over this growing interest," St. Clair said.

Baseball Awaits Work-Fight Bill

By JACK HAND.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Manpower remained baseball's big problem today as President Ford Frick, of the National league, returned from a series of Washington conferences to await final action on the "work or fight" bill and put into effect the new travel saving plan.

Frick said President Will Harridge, of the American League, the other half of the game's diplomatic team, had returned to Chicago and no further trips to the capital were planned until the limited service bill is passed or defeated.

Contrary to popular opinion, it was learned most baseball men favor passage of some sort of manpower bill, centralizing control in one government agency with a definite nation-wide policy.

Players have been unusually slow in returning their 1945 contracts and clubowners have attributed this reluctance to doubt about job status. No change for the better can be expected until congress takes a final vote on the pending legislation. An important move by baseball itself can then be expected.

Other than to repeat that "we had a most pleasant and helpful talk" with Mobilizer James Byrnes, Frick confined his comments to a discussion of the conference with Col. J. Monroe Johnson, ODT chief.

"I think it should be brought out that the ODT didn't ask us to make any 25 per cent mileage reduction," Frick stated. "That was an arbitrary figure agreed upon by Harridge and me before our press conference. Col. Johnson mentioned no figure and was very pleased at what we already had done."

Frick estimated the 25 per cent savings they expected to make would mean a reduction of approximately 1,000,000 passenger miles.

Having estimated cancellation of the all-star game as saving 500,000 miles, he said other cuts would be effected by doubling up on small trips and cutting number of players on some hops.

"There will be no drastic changes in our schedule," Frick predicted. "Nobody asked us to consider any east-west plan nor to cut our intersectional trips below the planned three.

"We can save travel room and I am working on a letter to go to my clubowners tomorrow explaining our trip and asking cooperation."

Clarifying the status of exhibition games the National League head said the club's spring training base would mean its "home city" before the season started. He pointed out the New York Giants and Yankees could play at Atlantic City, N. J., the Yanks' base, but could not play at Baltimore, a neutral city.

The executive committee of the Southeastern Conference will hold a meeting at the Biltmore hotel next Thursday, March 1, to consider proposals made by head coaches and athletic directors on the handling of officiating next season, Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia and of the conference, said last night.

A contract with the Southern Football Officiating Association, which expired at the end of last season, will not be renewed. Coaches and athletic directors met in Birmingham about a month ago and made suggestions for handling the assignment of officials through Commissioner M. S. Conner's office.

It is up to the executive committee to accept or reject these suggestions.

Grass' Horse Brings $15,000

Grassview Sensation, world's champion five-gaited stallion, owned by John W. Grass, Atlanta horseman, has been sold to James Franceschini, of Toronto, Canada, for a sum reported to be $15,000.

Mr. Grass bought the handsome chestnut several years ago for $2,750, and has since developed the horse into a consistent winner. Sensation has won the world's title two years and also several open classes at the biggest shows in the country. Reason for the sale, Mr. Grass said, was that business demands made it impossible for him to devote time to training and showing his champion. He would not disclose the sale price but said that Grassview Sensation brought one of the highest figures of the season in the saddle horse market.

Auburn Cage Team To Enter Tourney

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Bob Evans, coach of Auburn's cage team, declared tonight that the school would have a 10-man squad entered in the Southeastern Conference tournament at Louisville, Ky., March 1-3.

Auburn withdrew from the meet last night, but today tournament officials called upon the school to reconsider its action.

O'Hare's Jimmy Muffs His Trial

GRAND JUNCTION, Tenn., Feb. 22.—(AP)—The bid of O'Hare's Little Jimmy for the bird dog championship of the country faded under the California-owned pointer's tendency to stray during his run in the National Field Trials.

Jimmy, a four-year-old fresh from triumph in the United States Field Trial Club's open all-age stake, went off after the breakaway and remained out of judgment for 54 minutes. After he returned, he took to rambling.

The property of Frank O'Hare of Sacramento, Jimmy had run up a string of 14 victories. And although he finished fair in today's run, his early rambling lowered his performance. In all, Jimmy scored three bevy finds, pointed a marked single, pointed a fourth time to birds that had been ridden up and went through pointing motions twice without producing.

Jimmy's bracemate was Home Run Harrigan, entry of Miss Claudia Phelps, of Aiken, S. C. Harrigan, however, was put down with a bad shoulder, and under the handicap finished behind. He had three bevies and two unproductive points.

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle

800 Americans Perish When Jap Ship Sinks

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—More than 800 Americans perished when U. S. bombers sank a jammed Japanese prison ship off Luzon in December, a survivor revealed today.

But he said the bombing actually saved American lives, asserting that without it even more of the 1,600 men jammed in the suffocating holds would have smothered. A "great number," he said, already were dead when the bombs fell.

The survivor, Lt. George Karl Petritz, USN, 27, of Rockford, Ill., told newsmen the 1,600 were packed in three tiny, unventilated holds. He said he was in the afterhold with 800 men, in space not big enough to accommodate more than 40 normally. Two smaller holds held 400 each.

The ship went down only about 100 yards off shore, but less than half of the prisoners got off the vessel, Petritz said, although Japanese civilians had been taken off hours before while the prisoners were held aboard under threat of rifles.

30 BOMB CASUALTIES

The bombing attack caused not more than 30 casualties in his hold, he said, all of whom died 12 hours after the Japanese could have evacuated them had they chosen to do so. Prisoners who died from suffocation even before the attack were left in the hold with no effort to remove them.

The ship left Manila, presumably headed for Japan, on the night of Dec. 13, and the air attack began on the morning of the next day, continuing intermittently. The ship headed toward the beach and on the afternoon of Dec. 15 sank in deep water. Japanese civilians were evacuated during the day of the 14th but Formosa soldiers left aboard as guards met all attempts by the prisoners to leave the hold with rifle fire.

When the ship sank, less than 800 got free of the vessel and of those, only he and an Army sergeant escaped recapture, Petritz said. They made contact with Filipino guerrillas, and after six weeks, on Jan. 27, he was rescued by the Seventh Fleet and taken aboard the flagship of Adm. Kinkaid. Except for the sergeant and himself, the prisoners who survived the sinking were "herded" through the water by Japanese machineguns and recaptured.

SKIPPERED PATROL BOAT

Petritz entered the Navy in August, 1940, and reported to the Asiatic station in May, 1941, in command of a patrol craft operating out of Cavite. After the fall of Bataan he continued to operate inside Manila bay, based on Corregidor. When that fortress island finally fell he was taken prisoner.

He was with the group of American prisoners who were marched down Dewey boulevard in what he said was an attempt to impress the Filipino natives and to embarrass and humiliate the American prisoners.

Petritz said he personally had not witnessed any Japanese atrocities and that life in Bilibid and other Luzon prison camps, while extremely rugged, was bearable.

Lt. Petritz has been awarded the Navy Cross for heroism in his services as skipper of the patrol craft before his capture.

KAISER BEGAN ON OWN $100,000

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Rep. Woodruff, Republican, Michigan, contended today that Henry J. Kaiser founded his war industries on a private investment of $100,000, and that two of the firms have shown a profit of $27,274,487.

In a statement put in today's Congressional Record Woodruff said:

"Mr. Kaiser, without a doubt, has done a magnificent job in contributing to the success of our armed forces.

"He has displayed a capacity for organization and production that amazes everyone familiar with his record. However, his efforts have not gone entirely unrewarded."

North Georgia Methodists To Observe 'Laymen's Day'

Laymen's Day will be celebrated Sunday by the Methodist North Georgia Conference, with the theme of "The Church Meeting Its Responsibility for Ministerial Supply to the Homeland, to the World."

Laymen will take charge of the programs, laying emphasis on the need for trained ministers to fill existing pulpits, as well as providing the additional ministers for the church's extensive evangelistic crusade. This world-wide effort will begin March 4.

Jere A. Wells, district lay leader, will speak at the Monticello Methodist church at the 11 a. m. service, and Bernard Smith will address the Payne Memorial church at 11 a. m.

A centennial rally for some 3,000 Sunday school teachers and officers will be held at 2:30 p. m. Sunday at the Baptist Tabernacle. Guest speakers will be Dr. Clifton J. Allen, editorial secretary of the Baptist Sunday School Board, and Capt. E. A. Osterlo. Special music will be presented by Sgt. Earl Printz and Miss Ellen Hudson, with a story hour for the children.

Gainer E. Bryan, state secretary of the Baptist Training Union, will speak to the Beecher Hills Baptist church at 6:45 p. m. Sunday and will preach at the 8 p. m. service, announced the Rev. G. J. Davis, pastor. C. Guy Nichols is training union director.

Another young people's union, the Atlanta Methodist Young Adult group, will participate in its annual learning for life school at the Grace Methodist church Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The programs, which will begin at 7:30 p. m. each day, will feature instruction by the Rev. Waights G. Henry, executive secretary of the North Georgia Board of Education, and the Rev. J. C. Calloway, North Georgia conference Missionary secretary.

Dr. John T. Cocutz, former secretary of the Romanian Baptist church, and present pastor of the Romanian Baptist church of Akron, Ohio, will speak at the North Atlanta Baptist church, Hemphill avenue and Tenth street, at 7:30 p. m. Sunday, according to the Rev. C. C. Buckalew, pastor.

Dr. M. T. Rankin, former missionary to China and prisoner of the Japanese, will fill the pulpit at the Baptist Tabernacle at 10:50 a. m. Sunday, and will be guest speaker on the Baptist radio hour at 7:30 a. m. Dr. Rankin is now executive secretary of the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board.

Meetings scheduled for the week include the Lucile Daniel Clark Y. M. A. of the West End Baptist church at the home of Margie King, 659 Gordon place, S. W., tonight.

TRAVELED CALLER ASTOUNDS MAYOR

Mayor Hartsfield and his executive secretary, Ernest Brewer, are talking with pleasure of a new experience—a caller to the executive offices who did NOT want anything and who had NO gripe.

Comm. David C. Lamb, who spent 60 years in the Salvation Army before his recent retirement, appeared yesterday at Hartsfield's office, wishing "only to pay my respects to his honor, the mayor of the great city of Atlanta."

Hartsfield swept the office out and chatted with the celebrated world figure, who has spent years in travel in the performance of his duties. Comm. Lamb began his service when he was 16 and informed the mayor and Brewer that he is enjoying life and is taking a philosophical view of the war and future world peace.

Nazis Draft Children To Nurse, Fight

LONDON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The Germans conscripted some of their school children today—boys to dig trenches and fight and girls for auxiliary services—as their military commentators warned that a Russian frontal assault on Berlin was imminent.

The German official news agency DNB announced that the German equivalent of Boy and Girl Scouts had been taken out of school for war service. The Bund Deutscher Maedel (Hitler Girls' Organization) has been "split up in small units which will be employed wherever necessary—in signal units or supply depots or nursing services—wherever gauleiters (provincial governors) order," the agency said.

"While boys have been called up for digging defenses and are being trained for Volkssturn (People's Army) in order to be ready for any eventuality, these girl units will be responsible for preparing food, nursing sick boys and other duties," said DNB. "For the time of service girls need not attend schools."

The military commentator for the Transocean News Agency said Russian preparations for a frontal assault on Berlin from the Oder river, less than 40 miles away, "are completed."

Other German broadcasts warned again of an impending Allied west front offensive in the Aachen sector, declaring the present attacks were "only like the tuning of an orchestra."

Christian Science Lecture Given By G. Comer

Gordon V. Comer, CSB, of Denver, Col., last night delivered a lecture on Christian Science at the municipal auditorium, under auspices of the First, Second and Third Churches of Christ, Scientist, in Atlanta.

The speaker, who was introduced by Paul A. Vickers, said in part:

"Mary Baker Eddy writes: 'To grasp the reality and order of being in its Science, you must begin by reckoning God as the divine Principle of all that really is.' (Science and Health 275: 10-12) Isaiah gave a similar admonition. He points out that the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, said: '. . . Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me.' (Isa. 45:11.) But is that what mortals ordinarily do? No. When confronted with limitations they do not begin by asking God concerning the truth about man, but by consulting the material senses. They start with imperfection, rather than perfection. They start wrongly, but hope to end rightly.

"And it is healing in which mankind is primarily interested. If a mortal is in bondage to limitations, he naturally desires to be freed from them. In Christian Science, healing is brought about in the same way, no matter whether the limitations suggested is sickness, sin, lack, or any other inharmony.

"If the suggestions of sickness confronts us, we should ask ourselves this question: What does our Father-Mother God, the perfect One, whom John tells us to Love—what does He know about sickness? Can He possibly know anything about sickness, which is diametrically opposed to His loving, good, and true nature? No, He certainly cannot. If God is the all-governing power of the universe; if He is the only cause—the one perfect Life and Being—if He is divine Truth, divine good, where does this leave sickness? It leaves it a false, lying belief with no reality or power, an illusion of material sense."

Fabulous Burmese Mines Are Captured by Chinese

CALCUTTA, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Chinese troops under Lt. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan have captured the fabulous Bawdwin silver and lead mines 22 miles northwest of Lashio in Burma, depriving the Japanese of lead production sufficient to supply their whole war machine.

The mines, among the richest in the east, were captured intact yesterday after the Japanese had put up only brief resistance a few miles to the north. Chinese units drove on and captured Namtu, which is on a branch railroad to Lashio.

Other Chinese forces, which have been pushing directly down the old Burma road toward Lashio with the aid of American tank units, were reported across the Namtu river and within less than 25 miles of Lashio.

British troops in central Burma, now separated by only some 120 miles from the Chinese-American forces driving down from the northeast, enlarged their bridgeheads over the Orrawaddy river both north and southwest of the big Japanese base at Mandalay, which fast was being caught in a three-way squeeze.

The British force fighting in the bridgehehad at Singu, 40 miles north of Mandalay, advanced several miles and captured the village of Zigon. British and Indian troops extended the recently-won bridgehead in the Myinmu sector, 35 miles below Mandalay to a depth of six miles. Japanese counter-attacks had ceased in the area.

Allied planes continued to range at will over all central and southern Burma. Enemy air resistance had dwindled almost to the vanishing point.

Chungking announced that the first supply convoy from India had safely traversed the Myitkyina-Lungling cut-off of the Stilwell road and had reached Kunming on Tuesday. The cut-off saves more than 100 miles.

SALLY FORTH Says:

Former Atlantan Is Named To Russian Embassy Post

The forthcoming departure of Henry T. Smith for Russia, where he will serve as the third secretary at the American embassy in Moscow, places him in one of the key posts in the world. There is only one flaw in the rush of preparations for his departure, and that is that his wife, the former Nell Varner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Varner, will not be able to accompany him.

It seems that Russia, like Atlanta, has its housing problems, and Nell will not be able to go with her husband because of a lack of living accommodations. For the time being, Henry will live at the embassy, but later, when arrangements there can be made, Nell will join him.

The Smiths lived for some time in Costa Rica, where Henry was consul, and later in Mexico, where he was vice consul. It was while at the latter post that he was selected to study Russian at Cornell University in preparation for his Moscow assignment. Nell accompanied him to Cornell and they both studied Russian for three months. Nell says that it is undoubtedly the hardest language in the world to learn, however, being much harder than Latin, and many times harder than Spanish, which both she and Henry speak fluently.

Mr. Smith plans to go by plane to his new post. According to air travel regulations he can only take 55 pounds of luggage, so Nell is busy these last few days trying to select only the necessary articles to be packed. He can, however, write back for needed clothing, and after receiving the post report, which is issued to all members of the diplomatic staffs in foreign countries, he will be able to tell his wife what they will need for three years of residence there.

The son of Mrs. Elizabeth O. Smith, of Rome, Henry attended the University of Georgia Evening School, and also studied here for his diplomatic career.

VERA MAXWELL'S HAT

When Marianna (Mrs. John) Knox entertained at a luncheon at Davison's yesterday for attractive Vera Maxwell, the designer, the guests were intrigued with Miss Maxwell's smart gray ensemble, which was offset by an unusual tailored hat. And thereby hangs a story.

Miss Maxwell, as you know, is noted for her designs in tailored suits. She said yesterday that when she shopped for a hat to match her own gray suit, they were all "too dressy, too feminine and too flossy." So Miss Maxwell, the clever person that she is, went to the men's department, bought a gray hat to match, gave it a feminine slant over one eye, and emerged looking as smart and chic as though she had designed it herself.

A BELLE, A BAND AND A BOY

He had just returned from two years of Army duty overseas, and was home on furlough. He wanted to sleep and eat and play to his heart's content. He'd even like to dance if he knew how, just because it was so good to be home.

His studies at Emory had kept him so busy that he had never gotten around to learning to dance, it seems. But now that he had a whole month to loaf, he'd like to learn. So he asked one of his good friends—a belle of the college set—to teach him.

She readily agreed and made a date for his first lesson the next afternoon at her home on Emory drive.

Standing in the middle of the living room, with the radio broadcasting a popular band, he was a bit awkward. "Gosh," he stammered, "what must I do first?"

"Oh, don't be a goof," she began. "Just put your arms around me like this."

"Gosh!" he exploded. "And you expect me to pay attention to what my feet are doing?"

WEDDING IN FRANCE

A romance between a former Atlantan and an Army captain which began in wartime England resulted in a wedding in France recently when Lt. Margaret Eleanor Galloway, of Daytona Beach, Fla., became the bride of Capt. William F. Gaydos, of Newark, Ohio.

In accordance with the French law, the couple was married in a civil ceremony by the mayor of Chartres in his office the day before the religious ceremony took place at the Cathedral chapel in Chartres.

The bride, an Army nurse, was given in marriage by a colonel in the Medical Corps, and after the ceremony a dinner was held at the Officers' Club. Later the couple left for a wedding trip to Paris and Brussels, and then returned to their duties in the service.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Galloway and received her training at St. Joseph's infirmary here. She enlisted in the Army Nurse Corps in 1941 and has been overseas for 15 months. Capt. Gaydos is with the Air Corps Supply Depot in Belgium.

Shirley-McGahee Wedding Told

The marriage of Miss Mardelle Shirley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Shirley, of Morrow, to Joseph McGahee, of Atlanta, was recently solemnized at the Morrow Baptist church. Rev. J. W. Lietch performed the ceremony. Mrs. Ralph L. Bowldon Jr. was pianist and Miss Janet Nolan sang.

T. J. McGahee, of Cornelia, served as his brother's best man. The ushers were Herbert Whitworth, of Lavonia; Horace Andrews, Carnesville, cousins of the bride; A. H. Coogler, of Atlanta, and Clifford McGahee, nephew of the groom.

The bride chose as maid of honor, her sister, Miss Marlene Shirley, who wore light blue net over satin, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of pastel flowers. The bridesmaids were Miss Sybil Koone, of LaGrange, and Miss Mary Shirley, sister of the bride. They wore gowns of pink net like that of the maid of honor and carried similar bouquets. The junior bridesmaids were Misses Joan Mitchell and Joan Cox. They wore pale blue net over taffeta and their bouquets were of pastel flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white brocaded taffeta which featured a sweetheart neckline and leg of mutton sleeves. The full skirt extended to form a train and her fingertip veil was caught to her Juliet cap with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and swainsona.

Following the ceremony a reception was held for the bridal party and guests at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's l ok was kept by Miss Dorothy Mitchell and Mrs. Helda Keel. For their wedding trip, the bride wore a gold suit with brown accessories and purple orchids. Upon their return the couple will reside in Atlanta.

'No Nation Is Greater Than Its Women'—Margaret Hickey

By ANNIE LOU HARDY,
Society Editor.

"No nation is greater than its women," said Miss Margaret A. Hickey, of St. Louis, Mo., national president of the Business and Professional Women, when she addressed the local chapter of her organization at a banquet held last evening in her honor at the Ansley hotel. "As in all wars, we have had to depend greatly on women's services," she continued. "They constitute the hidden army upon which Hitler in his madness failed to count."

Miss Hickey, a comely, gray-haired woman, who exudes afficiency and dependablity, is in the city for a visit which has a three-fold purpose. In addition to delivering a message to the Business and Professional Women, she will confer today with the War Manpower Commission in which organization she holds the chairmanship of the women's policy committee, and she will also counsel with the Council of Guidance and Personnel Associations as a member of the board of representatives.

"TOMORROW IS TOO LATE"

Miss Hickey's subject last evening was "Tomorrow Is Too Late." In expatiating upon the topic, she traced women's part in the war, both abroad and on the home front, stressing her services on the home front where one out of every three jobs is held by women. Over 19,000,000 were employed up to last July, and over 7,000,000 of these women are married. Miss Hickey is concerned primarily with what is to become of these women when the guns are quiet and the war contracts are cancelled.

"To have democratic employment we must re-employ the man and the woman who have fought so that we here at home have never felt the full impact of war," she explained, "and if our employment practices are to be democratic, then the right of a woman to work is just as inviolate as that of a man. But we most promote the right of individual women to work without injuring the welfare of the whole society."

Miss Hickey believes that women with small children who do not need to work should not be encouraged to stay in the labor mart, but that more and more provision will have to be made for family arrangements based on the wife's working, when it is necessary.

"AID TO DEPENDENT CHILDREN"

"I believe we must extend our present 'aid to dependent children' so that all American children can have adequate educational opportunities, health protection and welfare programs," she said. "The programs should begin in the communities with a closer integration of welfare programs with the schools in order that we shall do more preventive work and less repair work. Children's needs will not wait until after the war. Tomorrow is too late, for they are growing and needing. A day too late may mean a life destroyed for all time."

Upon Miss Hickey's arrival yesterday, Mrs. Odessa Henson, a past president of the state Federation of Business and Professional Women, entertained at luncheon in her honor at Rich's Magnolia Room, with Mrs. Willard Patterson, a prominent member of the Atlanta group, as co-hostess. Special guests were the state president, Miss Bessilu Mauldin, of Thomaston, and Miss Anise Troth, president of the local branch.

Miss Hickey, a St. Louis business executive, has built a unique career school for women in her home city, where she trains secretaries, administrative assistants, and future executives. She commutes, it seems, between St. Louis and Washington, where she has been busily engaged in recruiting the nation's womanpower for war work as a member of the War Manpower Commission.

Miss Emmert, who is a student at the University of North Carolina, is spending the spring vacation with her parents on West Pace's Ferry road. The table will be decorated with pastel spring flowers and covers will be placed for Mrs. Marcus M. Emmert, Mrs. James L. Frink and a few close friends of the honor guests.

The Biltmore hotel will form the setting on March 3 when Mrs. Eldon R. Lindsey will give a luncheon in honor of Miss Emmert. The guests will include besides the honoree Mrs. M. M. Emmert, Mrs. R. D. Oglesby, Mrs. Jack Pierson, Misses Mary Upshaw, Bowdre Budd, Cortez Cooledge, Florence Harrison, Evelyn Block, Anne Hoyt, Alexa Williams, Mary Campbell Everett, Rose Meriwether Lewis and Vee Swanson.

Memorial Service For Henrietta Szold

A memorial service for Henrietta Szold, founder of Hadassah, will be held at the A. A. synagoguge this evening at 8 o'clock. The entire Jewish world mourns the death of Henrietta Szold who was one of the greatest Jewish women of her time. There are over 100,000 women in the ranks of Hadassah who have been guided into service through her inspiration. As much as any single American of her time, Henrietta Szold translated American ideals into vibrant realities.

Hadassah institutions have contributed in full measure to the armies of the United States, Great Britain and those of its Allies who participated in the liberation of North Africa and the battles of the Mediterranean theater of war. Director of Youth Aliyah, 12,000 boys and girls from tortured Europe are in Palestine today as a result of Henrietta Szold's guidance.

The local chapter of Hadassah, of which Mrs. J. M. Rosenfeld is president, consists of over 1,000 Jewish women. Rabbi Harry H. Eostein, of the A. A. Synagogue, will conduct a special Kaddish service.

Ormewood Victory Club Observes Anniversary

The Ormewood Victory Club will celebrate its third anniversary at a banquet this evening at 7:30 at the Hotel Candler in Decatur. Rev. L. E. Smith, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will be the principal speaker.

Mrs. Herbert S. Rasnake will give a reading and Tommy Huckaby will give a clarinet solo. A duet will be sung by Mrs. William Davidson and Mrs. R. D. Lunceford. Mrs. J. S. Huckaby will give a history of the club. Miss Jacqueline Lyons will lead the club in singing popular songs.

Mrs. Louise Lyons will install the officers of the coming year, which include: Mrs. Charles Evans, president; Mrs. J. S. Huckaby, vice president; Mrs. R. D. Lunceford, secretary; Mrs. A. D. Isbell, treasurer.

Meeting Cancelled

The Zionist meeting scheduled at the Mayfair Club Monday has been cancelled. Date of this meeting, to which members of Junior Hadassah, Senior Hadassah, Business and Professional Group of Hadassah and the Zionist organization will attend, will be announced later.

ON THE AIR

By PAUL JONES

Filling Fridays with festive fun, Sammy Kaye's Tangee Varieties, with Ventriloquist Paul Winchell and his dummy foil, Jerry Mahoney, will inaugurate a weekly series of Blue network broadcasts which will be heard on WAGA beginning today at 9 p. m.

A long-established favorite of Blue listeners to his Sunday Serenade, the Friday series will give the "Swing and Sway" maestro his second weekly commercial broadcast on the same network.

Comedy as well as music will be featured in Sammy Kaye's Tangee Varieties with Paul Winchell and his wise-cracking dummy, Jerry Mahoney, running the gamut of comic situations. Kaye sometimes helps along as straight man but Mahoney, although strictly a blockhead, usually comes out on top in the chatter sequences.

In contrast to the sentimental tone of his Sunday Serenade, Kaye will lean heavily toward brisk, peppy rhythms during his Friday broadcasts. Adding words to the music will be Sammy's quartet of vocalists, Nancy Norman, Billy Williams, Sally Stuart and Arthur Wright.

Betty Smith, author of "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," and James Dunn, star of the motion picture of the same title, visit Columbia's "Stage Door Canteen" at 9:30 p. m. over WGST.

Also scheduled for the gala servicemen's show are Andy Devine, sandpaper-voiced film actor, and Singer Jane Froman.

In the madcap department will be Weirenrath (Ward Wilson), Canteen comic. Raymond Paige conducts the orchestra. Producer is Roger White.

DR. BRADY

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

EVERY THIRD MONTH

I can't understand from your pamphlet whether you mean one should take one drop of mild tincture a day or. (Mrs. H. K. R.).

Answer: Take one drop every day in February, May, August, November, always in a half glassful or more of water. Instructions for taking of iodin ration mailed on request if you provide stamped envelope bearing your address.

BUTTER

How many tablespoonfuls of butter does a person need daily to keep in good health? I want to reduce but I do love lots of butter. (Mrs. R. E. W.)

Answer—If a person consumes a quart of milk a day he or she will keep in good health as well without any butter at all. But if you are serious, Ma'am, that is, serious enough to invest a quarter, send me one in negotiable condition, with a stamped envelope bearing your address for "Rules for Reducing." You should reduce and have butter, too.

DIATHERMY EXTIRPATION OF TONSILS

Four years ago you recommended Dr. —— for diathermy extirpation of infected tonsils. I received the treatment and it was a perfect success. Our regular family physician says my throat is as clean as it could have been after a tonsillectomy. (S. M.).

Answer: Tonsillectomy (with guillotine and snare or by dissection) is, in my opinion, a crude atrocity for mere hypertrophied or enlarged tonsils or infected tonsils. Of course diathermy (electrocoagulation) requires more skill, more patience, but it is far safer, far less painful or disabling. As for ultimate results, I'd submit to the atrocity only when or if diathermy had failed to produce the desired effect.

Design For Stretching Meat Is Housewife's Chief Need

By SALLY SAVER.

Since no one can say what meat will be found in the market, the wise housewife will collect a number of recipes for stews, meat loaves, pies and casseroles, and be prepared to make a main dish of whatever meat she finds. The following recipes are offered for the wartime meals collection. They are designed to make a little meat go a long way, and are adaptable. The recipes calling for round steak may be used for almost any piece of lean meat, beef, veal or lamb.

SAUSAGE AND LIMA BEAN CASSEROLE

- 1 pound pork sausage (bulk)
- 3½ cups cooked lima beans (1½ cups dried beans before cooking.)
- 3 cups hot water
- 1-4 cup chopped onion
- 1-4 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup tomato juice

Soak beans in hot water several hours or overnight. Simmer beans about 1½ hours. Brown half the sausage and the onion, stirring lightly. Drain off excess fat. Combine cooked beans, browned sausage, onion, mustard and salt. Place in a large casserole. Make 10 small balls from the remaining sausage meat, and place on top of beans. Pour tomato juice over beans and bake covered in a slow oven 325 degrees, for 45 minutes. Uncover and bake 15 minutes longer to brown sausage.

BURGUNDY MEAT LOAF

- 3-4 pound ground lamb, beef or veal
- 3-4 cup rolled oats
- 1-2 cup burgundy or claret wine
- 3 tablespoons chopped onion
- 1 1-4 teaspoons salt
- 1-4 teaspoon pepper
- 1-8 teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 1 egg beaten
- 2 tablespoons meat drippings

Combine ingredients in order given and pack into greased loaf pan. Bake in moderate oven 350 degrees, 1 hour, or until done. Serve with or without sauce or gravy.

DEVILED ROUND STEAK

- 4 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar
- 1 tablespoon grated horseradish
- teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- 1 tablespoon minced onion
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley (or 1 teaspoon minced celery leaves)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon tomato catsup
- 3 tablespoons melted margarine or salad oil

Mix all ingredients and simmer 5 minutes. Pour over a thick piece of round steak or veal; let the meat stand in the mixture about 30 minutes. Then place the meat and sauce in a shallow casserole, cover and bake 1 hour in a moderate oven.

VEAL STEW

- 1½ pounds boneless neck of veal
- clove garlic
- 2 cups water
- 1 white turnip
- ½ small cabbage
- 1 cup sliced string beans
- 2 medium potatoes
- 1 large carrot
- 1 onion, sliced
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 cup canned tomatoes
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- 1-4 cup rice
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- Dash cayenne pepper

Cut meat in small pieces and place in large kettle. Add garlic and water and simmer 1 hour. Prepare vegetables, but do not cut them too small. Add vegetables with remaining ingredients to meat, cover and simmer 30 minutes or until meat is tender and vegetables done, but not soft.

SAVORY SWISS STEAK

- ½ cup flour
- 2 teaspoons salt
- Dash of pepper
- 2 pounds round steak
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1 medium onion, sliced
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 can condensed tomato soup, diluted with an equal quantity of water

Rub flour, salt and pepper into the steak. Then brown on both sides in fat. Place onion slices and green pepper atop the steak. Dilute tomato soup with water, mixing well and pour over and around meat. Cover and simmer slowly for two hours. Serves 6.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS

March 21-April 19 (ARIES)—Previous to 9:32 a. m. your personal affairs may run into limitations and tact and caution should be used in dealings with others. After 9:32 a. m. should be a favorable period for attending to interests connected with relatives and for seeking co-operation around the home.

April 20-May 20 (TAURUS)—Today is likely to bring you extremes of mood. Sudden and impulsive actions will result unfavorably, so this will be a good time to take yourself strongly in hand and make no radical departures from the ordinary pursuits

May 21-June 20 (GEMINI)—This is not an auspicious time to change your plans. More will be gained by keeping quiet, for things are likely to go wrong and you will not be able to tell exactly why. Your best laid plans are likely to become all mixed up.

June 21-July 22 (CANCER)—Vibrations permeate the entire day that tend to agitate the mind and disturb the health. You may have a feeling of strain, or undertake more than you can carry through. It would be well, therefore to avoid assuming heavy obligations.

July 23-Aug. 22 (LEO)—It will be better to retrench and conserve your efforts and strength today. Your decisions may be somewhat clouded, or marked with indecision. Very unfavorable period for liquids and dealings with imporint people.

Aug. 23-Sept. 22 (VIRGO)—Those matters that call for rules and regulations, and are well planned, are favored before 10:10 a. m. The remainder of the day brings limitations, and is not favorable for seeking favors or undertaking risks.

Sept. 23-Oct. 22 (LIBRA)—New beginnings today should be surprisingly successful. An excellent day for obtaining better co-operation for business, for plans benefitting others and for decisions in general.

Oct. 23-Nov. 21 (SCORPIO)—More success will be obtained today by sticking to routine. Be deliberate in what you do and do not undertake affairs impulsively. The best portion of the day is previous to 12 noon.

Nov. 22-Dec. 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—Between 8:07 a. m. and 7:31 p. m. favors work that requires patience and time. Between 7:31 p. m. and 9 p. m. is not a favorable time to give in to temper. After 9 p. m. favors work of an inspirational nature.

Dec. 22-Jan. 19 (CAPRICORN)—A splendid day to promote your personal interests, for successful contacts made with those who are at the head of things. Contracts, plans and decisions made now will work out with fewer complications previous to 2:30 p. m.

Jan. 20-Feb. 18 (AQUARIUS)—Until 11:59 a. m. is a most propitious time for family and domestic affairs, making plans that involve older associates, also for agreements and conferences.

Feb. 19-March 29 (PISCES)—Keep in mind your poise today, for the indications are that you will be balked at every turn. Affairs do not go right under influences predominating today. Some hard lessons learned can be helpful in the future, however. Very unfavorable for real estate transactions and dealings with important people.

Choral Club Meets

The College Park Choral club met with its president, Miss Charlotte Stevens, recently. Following the rehearsal was a Valentine party. Tommy Doster, well-known bass soloist, sang three selections.

Refreshments were served in the dining room. The Valentine motif was carried out in the decorations. Mrs. C. W. Wall, director, was cohostess.

The WORRY CLINIC

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Psychology Is Asset If Applied Right

(Human friction causes more men to fail of their maximum salaries than technical inability. Notice how Clark used psychology while his brilliant engineering assistant failed to do so.)

CASE E-295: Hiram J., aged 62, is one of the two partners with whom Clark had so much difficulty 15 years ago, as I described in yesterday's Case Record.

"The old man is a stickler for punctuality," Clark added. "But our engineers are an independent bunch. Besides they may work an hour overtime the night before without complaining.

"So they don't always check in promptly at 8:30. Instead, they may stop at a restaurant and fail to show up till 9 o'clock or even 9:30 a. m.

"Knowing the old man's fetish about promptness, I get down on the job about 8:25 every morning, even if I must miss my breakfast to do so.

"Then after I have opened my mail and stuck around till the rest of the engineers are on duty, I tactfully slip out for breakfast.

LEARN YOUR CUSTOMER

"Thus I have pleased the old man, for he knows that I can be counted upon to be at the office when he arrives before 8:30.

"He holds me up to the rest of the engineering department as a model. 'Clark is always here before 8:30 in the morning,' he says.

"Whether or not he is aware that I duck out for breakfast I don't know. He should, however, for I've been doing this for years.

"But he wouldn't mind as much at having me take 30 minutes off for breakfast in the middle of the morning as to have me late for our 8:30 check-in time, since that is a fixed and inexorable habit of his.

"I have learned my boss, just as you used to urge salesmen to study their customers, Dr. Crane.

"As a result, my income tax alone is three times the salary of the average engineer.

"Here's another example of how I use psychology. My other boss, the brother of this one who is a stickler for promptness, thinks he is an engineer of high ability.

"He designed a new kind of boiler for reducing heat loss, etc. Then he showed it to my assistant. The latter curtly informed him that it wouldn't work. 'That's all cockeyed,' he bluntly told the boss. 'Any graduate of M. I. T. could tell you this would never work.'

"Well, my boss never went to college, but he likes to think he is a brilliant engineer. He also wants to feel that he keeps his finger on all aspects of our business.

"I know this is what he craves, for your psychology course taught me to analyze my customer or, in this case, my boss.

STRATEGY THAT WINS

"So when he brings his drawing to me, rather timidly, but hopefully, I give it my critical appraisal. 'This looks interesting,' I tell him and he brightens perceptibly. 'If we had more time to go into it, we might have something here. I'll lay it aside and when we have a slack period, suppose we get together on it?'

"He is pleased. 'That's right. We are rushed now, but when we have time, we'll do it,' he beams and walks away.

"A month later he may pass my desk and say, 'Clark, how are you coming with that new boiler design of mine?'

"Then I tell him I haven't had any spare time yet, but we must get at it the first slack period we have at the plant. He walks away satisfied, and thinks I have 10 times the ability of my assistant, whom he recently asked me if we couldn't dispense with."

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long 3c stamped, addressed envelope and a dime to cover typing or printing costs, when you send for one of his psychological charts.)

LOOKING AHEAD

By LOUIS WOLFE

LOUELLA PARSONS REPORTS:

Cooper, Young Teamed In 'Along Came Jones'

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 22.—(INS) Gary Cooper kept telling me, when I saw him at a party the other evening, that he knows I'll like "Along Came Jones," his first independent picture for International. Loretta Young, he said, has never been better. I put it down to parental pride.

Then I talked with Ben Bogeaus, who told me he had seen "Along Came Jones," and he liked it so well he immediately borrowed Loretta Young, as well as the director, Stuart Hesiler, from William Goetz, for "There Goes Lona Henry."

Remember Polan Banks' novel "There Goes Lona Henry?" It was first bought by RKO and is a very dramatic story of a gal who marries a governor.

The new Rainbow, Inc., formed with Leo McCarey, president; David Butler, vice president; Earl Rettig, secretary and treasurer; Bing Crosby, Buddy DeSylva and Hal Roach Jr., as members, starts off with a bang. "Bells of St. Mary's" is the first and "The Great American Story" their second. While the members of Rainbow, Inc., look the other way when you mention Bob Hope, I happen to know that when Bob is free, he is expected to join his pals in their new setup.

I can never get very excited over Greta Garbo's movie plans. She's a case of "in again, out again, gone, again, Finnegan." So until she actually steps before a camera I refuse to believe anything. I do know, however, that she has expressed interest in "The Fountainhead" and has talked with a Warner representative about starring in it. So—when it's possible to get the material and things necessary to making this elaborate movie, you can probably count Garbo in as the "Fountainhead" heroine.

Joan Barry, the girl in the Charlie Chaplin case, has been ordered to lose 10 pounds before she starts her picture at Monogram. So she's working hard to be streamlined by March 10. She is a daily visitor at the Terry Hunt emporium, where she is doing her best to lose enough weight to photograph well. I had heard it whispered that the Chaplin paternity case might be settled out of court, which everyone in Hollywood hoped, but indignant denials are being made on both sides.

Miss Mitchell Wed To Sgt. McDonald

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mitchell announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Rebecca Mitchell, to T./Sgt. Maurice McDonald which took place recently.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. R. Tatum at the Kirkwood Baptist church in the presence of relatives and a few friends. J. H. Ford acted as best man and Mrs. Ford, only sister of the groom, was the bride's attendant.

The couple will reside at the home of the groom's parents on Ridgedale road until Feb. 23, when they will leave for Ft. Myers, Fla., where Sgt. McDonald is stationed, after having served four years in the South Pacific area.

For Miss Brannon

Miss Evelyn Brannon, a popular bride-elect, was complimented recently at a shower given by Mesdames Elsie Minton, Helen Wood, and W. R. Kelley. Music was presented by Miss Marianne Edens, soloist, and Mrs. Ruth Lawson, pianist.

80 YWCA Teams In Fund Drive Short of Goals

Eighty of a total of 270 white teams in the $500,000 building fund campaign of the Atlanta Young Women's Christian Association are still under their minimum goals.

This was the situation as the sixth progress report luncheons of volunteer workers convened at noon today at the Y. W. C. A.

Of these teams still struggling toward their minimum goals, 35 are in the general teams' section, where a total of 74 teams are engaged in the necessary task of providing Atlanta with two new Y. W. C. A. buildings.

The men's teams, totaling 29 in all, have 20 of their teams still some distance from their goals. The girls' activities section, with 67 teams, have 25 teams under the 100 per cent mark.

The hard-hitting volunteer workers have so far accumulated a grand total of $451,140. The final report meeting will take the form of a dinner, which is to be held next Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Ansley hotel.

At the report luncheon this noon, Henry H. Robinson, one of the two associate chairmen of the men's teams, will speak.

CREDIT MEN MEET—Plans for financing purchase of an enormous quantity of post-war merchandise were discussed and new officers were installed at the annual meeting of the Atlanta Retail Credit Association which was held at Lakemoore last night. Seated, left to right, O. B. Feagin, retiring president; Talley Kirkland, new president; R. W. Schilling, 1st vice president, and J. H. Riggs, president of the national association, who addressed the group. Standing are: Rush C. Akin, 2d vice president; H. S. Darrington, membership secretary, and L. S. Gilbert, secretary and treasurer.

Talley Kirkland Named To Head Retail Credit Men

The importance of an increased educational program in connection with postwar financing was stressed by Joseph H. Riggs, president of the National Retail Credit Association, in an address before the annual meeting of the Atlanta association last night at Lakemoore.

The meeting, which took the form of a dinner and dance, was attended by more than 100 Atlanta credit men, who heard Riggs say: "An expanded educational program for credit grantors, who will be called upon to finance the enormous amount of durable, semi-durable and soft goods after the war is imperative."

Following Riggs' talk, the following new officers were installed: Talley Kirkland, president; R. W. Schilling, first vice president; Rush C. Akin, second vice president; H. S. Darrington, membership secretary, and L. S. Gilbert, secretary and treasurer. O. B. Feagin is the retiring president.

BACKSTAGE
By Paul Jones

"Winged Victory," a play which was written for the stage by Moss Hart as a tribute to the men who fly the Army's planes, and which was rewritten for the screen by the same Mr. Hart, whose talents are known the world over, is currently being offered as the grand prize in this week's entertainment at the Fox theater.

I say grand prize, because "Winged Victory" offers a variety of fine interludes, some tender, some amusing, others tragic and some heart warming.

The film takes three typical American boys from a small Ohio town. . . . They are joined in the Army by others from Brooklyn, Texas and other parts of the nation. . . . They live together, share each others' problems (one of the film's best sequences comes when one of the young soldiers is "washed out" while taking his flying instructions); they talk to each other of their home life and their love life and eventually they fly off together.

Sgt. Edmund O'Brien introduces a new type Brooklyn characterization which adds a great deal of zest to the humorous side of the story. . . . Cpl. Dan Taylor handles his clever bit of dialogue with a great deal of appeal and Pvt. Lon McAllister, who scored in "Stage Door Canteen," likewise gives a good account of himself. . . . Jeanne Crain, Jane Ball, Jo Carroll Dennison and Judy Holliday, the girl friends of the flying soldiers, really have no place in the picture, except to afford the film with the added value of a bit of pin-up art. . . .

The film quite obviously leans to the sentimental side, but in writing this exceptional story, Mr. Hart has included enough of the stuff called gallantry and pathos to balance the ledger in favor of good entertainment. There possibly have been better air stories, but I don't remember seeing one any more picturesque, or any which would hold interest as fully as this one.

Abbott and Costello

An Abbott and Costello picture is in a sense of the word like spinach. . . . You've gotta like it before you can take it. . . . No amount of persuading will convince you that they, or it, is good. . . .

So it is with reservation that I recommend the new A&Comedy to you. . . .

Entitled "Home Come the Co-Eds," the new flicker affords the exponents of slapstick many feet of film in which to give out with a variety of nonsensical goings-on as they turn to exclusive girls' college inside out in an effort to keep it from going under the weight of an about-to-be-foreclosed mortgage. . . . If you're wondering how they get into the school in the first place, it was under the pretense of being caretakers. . . .

If you can't swallow A&C, Phil Spitalny and his all-girl band provide theatergoers with several listenable tunes and Peggy Ryan, June Vincent, Charles Dingle and Richard Lane waltz around the sets, playing straight men for the A&C gags and joining in the revelry generally.

French-British Alliance Hinted

PARIS, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Georges Bidault will leave for London, probably tomorrow, to confer with Foreign Secretary Eden on details of the Crimea conference, the French government announced tonight.

A dispatch from London, where it was announced that Bidault had accepted Britain's invitation to make the trip, said the visit was expected to help relieve tension resulting from French resentment over being excluded from the Crimea discussions, but that the real purpose was thought to be negotiations preliminary to a British-French military alliance.

An authorized official said today France was satisfied thus far with the position accorded her in the postwar world by the Crimea conference but was reserving decision on participation in the San Francisco United Nations conference.

Building of Shell Speeded For Minneapolis Symphony

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos, will be presented at the Municipal auditorium today as one of the highlights of the sponsorship of the Atlanta brilliant French pianist-composer, p. m. performance.

It is hoped that the new symphonic shell, which has been especially designed for the concert programs at the auditorium will be set up for this program. Burt Welborn, manager of the auditorium, said late last night that a group of stage men were working feverishly to have the beautiful new shell on the stage for the presentation, "but bad weather was hampering their progress no end."

A special matinee for children is scheduled for 3:30 p. m., when Mitropoulos will conduct the orchestra in a program of lighter symphonic music especially arranged for this type audience.

During the night performance Casadesus will play "Concerto No. 5 in E flat Major," opus 73, by Beethoven. The orchestra will be heard in "Overture, Roman Carnival," opus 9, by Barlioz, and the orchestra will then close with the "Symphony No. 5 in E Flat Major" opus 97, by Schumann.

The orchestra, organized 42 years ago, is composed of 90 musicians.

Arnall to Take Part In Gracewood Program

Gov. Arnall will participate in ceremonies opening a new building of the state hospital for mentally defective children at Gracewood, near Augusta, at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

The building, construction on which was begun some years ago, is modern in every detail, and has a bed capacity of 100.

House Speaker Roy Harris, whose home is Augusta; Judge A. J. Hartley, director of the State Welfare Department, and senators and representatives also will participate in the ceremonies.

Stimson Denies Terror Bombing

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Secretary of War Stimson today expressed belief an "excusable but incorrect interpretation" of remarks by a briefing officer had led to reports that the Allies had decided on terror bombing of the German civilian population.

"Our policy has never been to inflict terror bombing on civilian populations," Stimson replied to a news conference question as to whether this indicated a change in our air policy.

"I have investigated that report," the secretary said, "and find that it arose from what I consider an excusable but incorrect interpretation of some remarks by a briefing officer at supreme allied headquarters.

Britons Indorse ASNE Campaign Of News Freedom

LONDON, Feb. 22. — (AP) — The three chief spokesmen for the British press today indorsed the world-wide campaign of the American Society of Newspaper Editors for unrestricted access to news and uncontrolled dissemination of news from and to all countries."

Formal statements of approval were issued in response to invitations left here by three representatives of the ASNE on a world tour in behalf of press freedom and embodiment of proper safeguards for the press in forthcoming peace treaties.

The ASNE delegates, Wilbur Forrest, Ralph McGill and Carl W. Ackerman, told editors, owners and government officials they sought for the postwar world "uncontrolled and unrestricted news dissemination" and proposed that "governmental agencies of propaganda and censorship . . . should be eliminated at the close of hostilities."

Political Conventions Freed of Restrictions

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The committee on war conventions has decided that "necessary" political assemblies do not require a permit under the government ban on conventions.

Necessary political conventions, an agency spokesman said today, are those required by state or federal laws as part of the governmental machinery.

In all cases, however, the committee wants attendance restricted to the minimum needed to transact business.

Supplies for Poland

MOSCOW, Feb. 22.—(AP)—An American Red Cross mission has departed with medical supplies for Poland.

Where Germany's Moving Captives

LONDON, Feb. 20. — (AP) — The Russians have freed 2,661 British Commonwealth prisoners of war in German camps, Maj. Arthur Henderson, undersecretary for war, announced today in commons.

Henderson gave the first detailed information received here on the movement of American and British prisoners.

He said prisoners from Stalagas 20A, 20B and 2B were moving through Mecklenburg, some by rail.

From Stalag Luft three some 2,000 American and British prisoners have been transferred to Stalag 2A and to Luckenwalde, 2,000 to Marlag Milag Nord near Hamburg, 2,000 to Stalag 3C east of Frangfurt on the Main and 4,000 to Stalag 7A in Bavaria.

Prisoners from Stalags 8A and 8C are moving through Saxony Some prisoners from Stalag Lult four are reported to be at Usedom, near Swinemuende on the Baltic.

Stalag Luft eight was reported to be near Spremberg in Brandenburg, whence prisoners are being transferred to the neighborhoods of Nuernberg and Moosburg in Bavaria. Stalag 8B is reported to be moving to Aussig in Bohemia. Stalag 344 is said to be moving to Theresiestadt in Bohemia.

QUADS' BIRTHDAY PARTY IS SPOILED

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 22. (AP)—A dish of hot custard will keep little Martine Lashley from celebrating her fourth birthday tomorrow with the other three Lashley quads.

Martine is in a Louisville hospital with minor burns suffered when she upset a dish of hot custard at her Leitchfield, Ky., home Tuesday.

The other quads—Mildred, Beulah and John—were more upset over the accident than Martine, said their 19-year-old sister, Ilean.

Rotary Observes 40th Anniversary

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Rotary International will commemorate its 40th anniversary tomorrow with an international radio hookup linking Sweden, England, Brazil, Hawaii and the United States. President Richard H. Wells, Pocatello, Idaho, said speakers would include Paul P. Harris, 76, from Montgomery, Ala., who founded Rotary in Chicago on Feb. 23, 1905. The program was scheduled for the National Broadcasting Company network from 12 to 12:30 p. m., Atlanta time. Shortwave will carry it throughout the world, Wells added.

WENT TO SEE OIL

Waycross Sends Panel To Vidalia

By LISTON ELKINS,
Managing Editor, Waycross Journal Herald

WAYCROSS, Ga., Feb. 22.—(AP). For the first time in the many decades of sporadic oil search in Georgia, intensified during the past five years, oil actually has been brought to the surface in the Cracker state.

In company with other members of the oil and gas committee of the Waycross Chamber of Commerce, chief proponents for the past six years of the drilling campaign to determine oil possibilities in the coastal plains area of the state, I saw oil on the surface of the slush pit at the Toombs county test of Tropic Oil Company near Vidalia yesterday.

An oil slick with gas bubbles brought from the 2,300-foot hole by the mud pump, following a Schlumberger test which was completed at 5 a. m. Wednesday, after an all-night operation which was witnessed by geologists and other representatives of major oil companies who flocked to Vidalia following the report of General Manager R. T. Davis that the Tropic Oil Company test had reached oil- bearing sands.

Whether oil is present in commercial quantities remains to be seen but oil was brought out of the hole, evidence which definitely establishes the presence of black gold beneath the soil of Georgia.

The test shows oil from the top of the cretaceous.

Sidewall coring was taken at 1,869 feet, 2,178 feet, 2,241 feet and 2,281 feet before the test was shut down at 2,300 feet for the Schlumberger test.

Arrangements are now being made to continue the test to a depth of around 3,000 feet.

It was revealed that the Sun Oil Company directed the Schlumberger test and the film and cores are being handled by Division Geologist D. J. Munroe, whose headquarters are in Tallahassee, Florida.

Evidence already produced by the test indicates that there is a good chance that deeper drilling will bring in other oil bearing zones but if not the present oil-bearing strata will be tested to see if it will bring in a producer.

C. W. Deming, consultant for the oil and gas committee of Waycross, and E. C. Rees, president of the Waycross and Ware County Chamber of Commerce, were members of the Waycross group inspecting the Vidalia test.

WILSON'S WEEKLY Bulletin

By George Rector

Food and Nutrition Consultant to Wilson & Co.

AN INVITING EMERGENCY SHELF DINNER

When the clock seems to jump ahead to five o'clock before you've accomplished your particular job, it's a pleasure to be able to reach up on the shelf for the makings of an easy dinner. It's on just such a busy day that your emergency shelf—stocked with ready-cooked foods—comes to your rescue.

Corned Beef Hash and Eggs—A Tasty Quickie

1 can Wilson's Certified Corned Beef Hash
2 tbsp. Certified Margarine, melted
6 Clear Brook Eggs

Cut open both ends of the can of Wilson's Certified Corned Beef Hash and remove the roll of hash. Cut into 6 slices and pan fry in the melted margarine, browning both sides well. Or brush the top side of each slice with melted margarine, and broil about 6 minutes on each side or until nicely browned. Top each slice with a poached egg and serve at once.

Clip Recipe Here

QUICK AS A WINK

Wilson's Certified Corned Beef Hash is so good because it's made of high quality ingredients, expertly seasoned. Serve it with poached Clear Brook Eggs, whole carrots seasoned with melted Certified Margarine, tossed vegetable salad, toast and coffee and you can almost skip dessert. However, if your family really "goes" for dessert, try whipping a cup of strained cranberry sauce into 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. You'll need no sugar. Just pour it into sherbet glasses and set in the refrigerator during dinner. Then whisk it out for dessert—ready to serve.

Have a Practical Shelf

Don't be a high-brow about your pantry emergency shelf—no need for delicacies only—keep a stock of food on hand for "just us folks." You know the kind of handy meat dishes that are quick to prepare when Sis brings home company.

Wilson's MOR has many quick uses; Certified Chili Con Carne and Tamales hit the spot; Certified Deviled Ham fills many sandwiches and Certified Corned Beef Hash is so good it would please even Jiggs.

Don't forget to replace foods used from your emergency shelf so it will really live up to its name.

Low on Points?

If you're low on points—here are some hints on making them stretch:

(1) Use a variety of fillers for meat loaf—B-V bread stuffing is a tasty favorite. The family will sigh with pleasure.

(2) Grind left-over meat loaf with vegetables, make into patties and serve with hot B-V gravy.

(3) Broil Certified Liver Sausage as a main course dish. It's packed with iron.

(4) Check the no-point meats and learn how to prepare them so they're really tasty. Every one of them can be delicious.

Sincerely,
George Rector

Baptist Missionaries Liberated at Manila

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 22.—(AP) Seven of the eight missionaries sent out by the Southern Baptist Convention and made prisoners of the Japs when they arrived at Manila are among the Americans liberated there, the Baptist foreign mission board announced today.

The eighth—Rufus Gray, of Titusville, Fla.—will not return. He died under mysterious circumstances in the hands of the Japanese while their prisoner.

3 Georgians' Safety Thrills Families

Atlanta, Columbus, Macon Soldiers Freed, Bryan's Story Reveals

The families of three Georgia men have been gladdened by news their relatives have been liberated from a German prison camp, the same camp from which was freed Wright Bryan, managing editor of The Atlanta Journal.

In a copyrighted story, Bryan revealed the liberation of Lt. Don M. Chappell, whose wife lives in Columbus; Capt. Ira Glenn Bottoms, whose mother, Mrs. F. M. Bottoms, lives at 1782 Springer street, N. W., and J. M. Sixes, of Macon, whose rank and age were not listed.

Previously, news had been received of the liberation from the camp, known as Oflag 64, of Lt. Frank Colley, of Washington, Ga.

In Columbus, Mrs. Chappell said she was so happy and excited: "I just can't seem to think straight."

SEIZED ON D-DAY

Lt. Chappell, in the 505th Parachute Regiment of the 82d Airborne Division, fell into German hands on D-Day during the invasion of Normandy. He had parachuted onto Sicily several months earlier and received a wound for which he was awarded the Purple Heart.

Mrs. Chappel said she had received 15 letters from her husband since he was captured.

A native of Buffalo, Lt. Chappel is the son of an Army chaplain, also serving overseas. He met and married his wife, the former Frences Mendenhall, while attending Officers' Candidate School at Fort Benning. When the war started he was a junior at Park College, Kan., and Mrs. Chappell said her husband probably would return to college after the war.

Capt. Bottoms, 31, is a former neon sign maker. He landed in France last Dec. 5 and was reported missing in action just two weeks later. Details of his capture have not been revealed.

His mother, informed of his liberation, said: "I'm so happy. I have just kept trusting and praying he would be all right."

Bottoms graduated from Tech High school in 1929 and attended Georgia Tech night school before entering the Army in 1941. He is unmarried.

Lt. Colley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll D. Colley, of Washington, Ga. His parents received a cablegram from him Wednesday in which he said:

"The Germans and I parted company Jan. 22. Am now in Moscow and hope to be home soon. Love to all."

Lt. Colley's father is an attorney. The officer was captured in the battle of Faid Pass, Africa, two years ago. He is a graduate of Duke University and was working on his Ph. D. degree at the University of Georgia when he enlisted in the Army.

Press reports a few days ago said he and two other officers hitch-hiked from Poland, where Oflag 64 is located, to Russia, after Russian troops overran the site of the camp.

U. S. Timber Sold

Almost 2,000,000 board feet of timber from Union county in north Georgia has been sold for military and essential civilian uses, Joseph C. Kircher, regional forester of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, has announced. The timber is to be cut from the Chattahoochee national forest in the Ivylog creek section, Kircher said.

½ cup sliced onions
Salt Pepper

Melt drippings and add potatoes and onions. Season to taste. Cover and cook about 15 minutes or until almost tender. Remove cover and brown. Fry Armour's Star Liver Sausage on each side (4-5 minutes) and arrange on platter with potatoes. Garnish with parsley. 4 servings.

Made Fresh Daily in ATLANTA

Armour's Star Braunschweiger Liver Sausage has a wonderful flavor! It's mild, delicate to taste . . . smooth, rich and deliciously spready. And so nutritious—with its high vitamin and mineral content! Serve it often hot or cold. Be sure to ask for Armour's Star . . . for liver sausage at its best.

HE HAS REAL TAX TROUBLE

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 22.—(AP)—A taxpayer who sought help from the office of internal revenue will have to settle his own problem if he wants to file Form W-2, which requires listing of incomes of both husband and wife.

"My wife won't tell me her income," he told a deputy collector. "She says it's none of my business."

WEATHERMAN! IT'S RAINING SHIRTS

It rained shirts and shorts out at the home of J. F. Shields, 317 Orleans street, S. E.

Shields told Detective Supt. J. A. McGibben he awoke several mornings ago to find a large chinaberry tree in his back yard festooned with men's clothing. Detectives sent to the scene found the bulk of the clothing in the very top of the tree, McKibben said yesterday, and they had to employ long poles to fish it out.

The laundry marks were checked, but no Atlanta laundry employs the mark found, McKibben said as he expressed the opinion that the clothing belonged to some airplane passenger, and fell from the plane, the bag opening as it tumbled earthward.

Unless a claimant is found the clothing will be turned over to Shields, McKibben said.

Group Okays Manpower Bill Shifting Penalties to Bosses

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The Senate Military Committee, in approving a revamped manpower control bill today, shifted the proposed fine-and-jail penalties from industrial workers to their employers.

At the same time, the committee voted for five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine for deferred farm workers who leave the farm without their draft boards' permission.

Almost immediately a move was started to substitute the house-approved work-or-jail bill when the committee measure reaches the senate floor.

Senator Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina, said that if he becomes convinced he can obtain majority support for the action, he will move to displace the committee's bill with the house bill, written by himself and Chairman May, Democrat, Kentucky, of the House Military Committee.

"The bill reported by the committee is not a total effort and to that extent I am disappointed," he said.

The bill, nearly three weeks in committee, emerged today by a vote of 13 to 4, with one member refraining from voting. By no means all of those who voted affirmatively actually favor the legislation as a whole; their object was to get something out on the floor for a showdown.

The senate measure would apply to all persons regardless of age or sex. The house bill would affect only civilian men 18 through 45 who had not been specifically deferred from the draft by law, such as public officials or divinity students.

In the house bill the penalties would be directed against workers who left essential jobs without their draft board's permission, or who refused to leave their present jobs for more essential work.

Under the senate version, employers who disregarded War Manpower Commission employment ceilings or who hired new workers in defiance of WMC orders would be subject upon conviction to imprisonment up to one year or to a fine of as much as $10,000 or both. In addition, such employers could not deduct as a business expense on their income taxes wages paid workers in violation of the WMC order, and the government would subtract such amounts in settling up for contracts executed by the employer.

The farm section of the bill reiterates congress' determination that the essentiality of farm workers shall be judged solely on the basis of their employment in a necessary agricultural occupation and the availability of replacements, and not on their relative essentiality in any other occupation, including the military.

The committee bill originally was framed as a mild and largely voluntary substitute for the house work-or-jail bill, but in its end form contained penalties about as sharp, although directed at a different class.

The War Mobilization Director, James F. Byrnes, would be authorized by the committee bill to channel war contracts to areas where they can best be carried out. The availability of manpower would be given due consideration in increasing or decreasing production schedules.

The existing labor-management committees on the placement of labor would be given legal status and local co-operative efforts of management, labor and agriculture would be encouraged.

Persons accepting employment in areas away from their homes, in compliance with a WMC request, would have their travel expenses paid by the government. They would be entitled to priority on their old jobs if they applied for re-employment within 30 days after they were no longer needed for war work.

Here is the vote by which the committee reported the bill:

For—Senators Thomas, Democrat, Utah; Johnson, Democrat, Colorado; Hill, Democrat, Alabama; Downey, Democrat, California; O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming; Stewart, Democrat, Tennessee; Maybank, Democrat, South Carolina; Wagner, Democrat, New York; Austin, Republican, Vermont; Gurney, Republican, South Dakota; Wilson, Republican, Iowa; Burton, Republican, Ohio, and Thomas, Republican, Idaho.

Against—Senators Chandler, Democrat, Kentucky; Kilgore, Democrat, West Virginia; Murray, Democrat, Montana, and Revercomb, Republican, West Virginia.

Not Voting—Senator Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire.

In Memoriam

My devoted father, Prime Erusey.
My heart still aches with sadness,
I shed many tears.
My life seems oh, so empty
At the end of 10 long years.
MARY WEST, Daughter.

In Memoriam

In sweet memory of my husband, Mr. Albert L. Clarke, who passed five years ago today, February 23, 1940.
In my heart is a loving picture
Of a husband I laid to rest;
In memory's frame I will keep it,
Because he was one of the best.
MRS. FANNYE CLARKE.

Card of Thanks

The family of Mrs. Mildred Wilbourn Cofield wishe. to thank each and every one for their kind expressions of sympathy and beautiful florals. We especially thank Ivey Brothers for their courteous services.
REV. AND MRS. H. W. WILBOURN, Mother and Father.
MR. NATHANIEL WILBOURN, Brother.
MRS. LILLIE MAE ROQUEMORE, Sister.

Try this FAMOUS Gebhardt RECIPE FOR REAL
Chili con Carne

★ 2 Lbs. Beef — 6 tbsp. fat
2 tbsp. Gebhardt's Chili Powder
2 cloves garlic, minced
3 tbsp. flour 2 tsp. salt
2 tbsp. chopped suet
1 large onion, chopped
1½ qts. hot water

Use economy cuts of meat; cut in small chunks (do not grind). Mix with Gebhardt's Chili Powder, garlic, flour. Melt fat and suet in deep pot; fry onion until tender; add meat mixture. Cook 15 minutes; add salt; gradually pour on hot water. Simmer until tender.

BIG STAR Super MARKETS and LITTLE STAR STORES

REFRIGERATOR RAIDERS

While the more rugged midnight Ice Box Raiders go in for triple-decker sandwiches (comic strip style), a great majority are more conservative and will settle for a glass of warm milk and crackers or some other light knickknack.

Whatever your nocturnal feast might be . . . you will find shopping at Big Star and Little Star as easy as raiding the ice box at home. You leisurely make your selections from a wide variety of tempting, fine-quality foods. Conveniently arranged stocks and everyday low prices insure satisfaction and savings. Yes, it's as easy as refrigerator raiding in your own home.

NO FURLOUGHS For Kitchen Wardens

Almost all of us sometimes have this thought — "I never want to see another flattened tin can, a jar of kitchen grease or another pile of last week's newspapers." Yes, our home-front contributions to victory are more of an irksome than hazardous nature.

We must remember that our boys overseas also have their moments of reflection. They never want to see another buddy wounded, hear another shell come over or sleep in another water-logged foxhole. Their job is both irksome and hazardous . . . yet . . . they keep fighting, keep gaining, keep winning.

Let us renew our determination to help all we can. Let's do more than before. Remember . . . NO FURLOUGHS FOR KITCHEN WARDENS UNTIL OUR BOYS COME MARCHING HOME.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION Concerning UTILITY (Grade C) BEEF

When our markets are unable to obtain ample supplies of AA and A Grades of Beef, Utility (Grade C) is purchased if available. While we would much prefer to sell only the higher grades at all times, we offer Utility Beef because it is equally nutritious and can be appetizingly prepared as pot roasts, Swiss steaks, meat loaf, stews and other highly seasoned dishes.

Utility beef should not be served as a rare roast or broiled as a thick, juicy steak. Utility Beef must be slowly and thoroughly cooked.

Grades of Beef are plainly marked in our display cases. Shop with confidence at your Big Star and Little Star Stores.

Due to wartime shortages, some of the items listed below might be temporarily out of stock at your store. Please remember that additional supplies will be offered at an early date.
